POEMS,

BY

WILLIAM COWPER,

OF THE INNER TEMPLE, ESQ.

IN TWO VOLUMES.

VOL. I.

Sicut aquæ tremulum labris ubi lumen ahenis Sole repercuffum, aut radiantis imagine lunæ, Omnia pervolitat latè loca, jamque fub auras Erigitur, fummique ferit laquearia tecti.

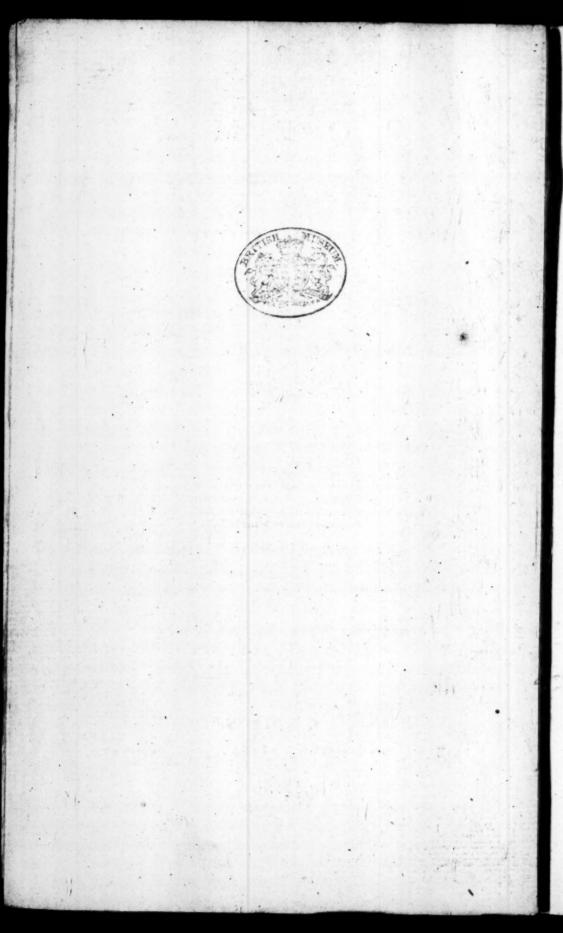

VIRO. Æn. v111.

So water, trembling in a polish'd vafe, Reflects the beam that plays upon its face; The fportive light, uncertain where it falls, Now strikes the roof, now stashes on the walls.

THE SIXTH EDITION.

LONDON:

PRINTED FOR J. JOHNSON, ST. PAUL'S CHURCH-YARD.

PREFACE

TO THE

FIRST VOLUME.

When an Author, by appearing in print, requests an audience of the Public, and is upon the point of speaking for himself, whoever presumes to step before him with a presace, and to say, "Nay, but hear me first," should have something worthy of attention to offer, or he will be justly deemed officious and impertinent. The judicious reader has probably, upon other occasions, been beforehand with me in this reslection: and I am not very willing it should now be applied to me, however I may seem to expose myself to the danger of it. But the thought of having my own name perpetuated in connection with the name in the title page, is so pleasing and slattering to the seelings of my heart, that I am content to risk something for the gratification.

This Preface is not defigned to commend the Poems to which it is prefixed. My testimony would be insufficient for those who are not qualified to judge properly for themselves, and unnecessary to those who are. Besides, the reasons which render it improper and unseemly for a man to celebrate his own performances, or those of his nearest relatives, will have some influence in suppressing much of what he might otherwise wish to say in savour of a friend, when that friend is indeed an alter idem, and excites almost the same emotions of sensibility and affection as he seels for himself.

It is very probable these Poems may come into the hands of some persons, in whom the sight of the Author's name will awaken a recollection of incidents and scenes which, through length of time, they had almost forgotten. They will be reminded of one, who was once the companion of their chosen hours, and who set out with them in early life, in the paths which lead to literary honours, to influence and affluence, with equal prospects of success. But he was suddenly and powerfully withdrawn from those pursuits, and he lest them without regret; yet not till he had sufficient opportunity of counting the cost, and of knowing the value of what he gave up. If happiness could have been found in classical attainments, in an elegant tafte, in the exertions of wit, fancy, and genius, and in the efteem and converse of such perfons as in thefe respects were most congenial with himself, he would have been happy. But he was not-He wondered (as thousands in a similar situation (till do) that he should continue diffatisfied, with all the means apparently conducive to fatisfaction within his reach-But in due time, the cause of his disappointment was discovered to him-He had lived without God in the world. In a memorable hour, the wisdom which is from above visited his heart. Then he felt himself a wanderer, and then he found a guide. Upon this change of views, a change of plan and conduct followed of courfe. When he faw the bufy and the gay world in its true light, he left it with as little reluctance as a prisoner, when called to liberty, leaves his dungeon. Not that he became a Cynic or an Ascetic-A heart filled with love to God, will affuredly breathe benevolence to men. But the turn of his temper inclining him to rural life, he indulged it, and the providence of God evidently preparing his way and marking out his retreat, he retired into the country. By these steeps the good hand of God, unknown to me, was providing for me one of the principal bleffings of my life; a friend and a counsellor, in whose company for almost seven years, though we were seldom seven successive waking hours separated, I always sound new pleasure. A friend, who was not only a comfort to myself, but a blessing to the affectionate poor people, among whom I then lived.

Some time after inclination had thus removed him from the hurry and buftle of life, he was still more fecluded by a long indifposition, and my pleafure was fucceeded by a proportionable degree of anxiety and concern. But a hope, that the God whom he ferved would support him under his affliction, and at length vouchfafe him a happy deliverance, never forfook me. The defirable crifis, I truft, is now nearly approaching. The dawn, the prefage of returning day, is already arrived. He is again enabled to refume his pen, and some of the first fruits of his recovery are here presented to the public. In his principal subjects, the same acumen which diffinguished him in the early period of life, is happily employed in illustrating and enforcing the truths of which he received fuch deep and unalterable impressions in his maturer years. His fatire, if it may be called fo, is benevolent, (like the operations of the skilful and humane surgeon who wounds only to heal) dictated by a just regard for the honour of God, an indignant grief excited by the profligacy of the age, and a tender compassion for the souls of men.

ed audelerving the name of knowled

His favourite topics are least insisted on in the piece entitled Table Talk; which therefore, with fome regard to the prevailing tafte, and that those who are governed by it may not be discouraged at the very threshold from proceeding farther, is placed first. In most of the larger Poems which follow, his leading defign is more explicitly avowed and purfued. He aims to communicate his own perceptions of the truth, beauty, and influence of the religion of the Bible. - A religion which, howver discredited by the misconduct of many who have not renounced the Christian name, proves itself, when rightly understood, and cordially embraced, to be the grand desideratum, which alone can relieve the mind of man from painful and unavoidable anxieties, inspire it with stable peace and solid hope, and furnish those motives and prospects, which, in the present state of things, are absolutely necessary to produce a conduct worthy of a rational creature, diftinguished by a vastness of capacity, which no affemblage of earthly good can fatisfy, and by a principle and pre-intimation of immortality.

At a time when hypothesis and conjecture in philosophy are so justly exploded, and little is considered as deferving the name of knowledge, which will not stand the test of experiment, the very use of the term experimental in religious concernments, is by too many unhappily rejected with difguft. But we well know, that they who affect to despile the inward feelings which religious persons speak of, and to treat them as enthusiasm and folly, have inward feelings of their own, which, though they would, they cannot suppress. We have been too long in the fecret ourselves to account the proud, the ambitious, or the voluptuous, happy. We must lose the remembrance of what we once were, before we can believe, that a man is fatisfied with himself. merely because he endeavours to appear so. A fmile upon the face is often but a mask worn occasionally and in company, to prevent, if possible, a fuspicion of what at the fame time is passing in the heart. We know that there are people, who feldom fmile when they are alone, who therefore are glad so hide themselves in a throng from the violence of their own reflections; and who, while by their looks and their language they wish to persuade us they are happy, would be glad to change their conditions with a dog. But in defiance of all their efforts, they continue to think, forebode, and tremble. This we know, for it has been our own state, and therefore we know how to commiserate it in others.—From this state the Bible relieved us—When we were lead to read it with attention, we found ourselves described.—We learnt the causes of our inquietude—we were directed to a method of relief—we tried, and we were not disappointed.

Deus nobis bæc otia fecit.

We are now certain that the gospel of Christ is the power of God unto salvation, to every one that believeth. It has reconciled us to God, and to ourselves, to our duty, and our situation. It is the balm and cordial of the present life, and a sovereign antidote against the sear of death.

Sed battenus bec. Some smaller pieces upon less important subjects close the volume. Not one of them I believe was written with a view to publication, but I was unwilling they should be omitted.

JOHN NEWTON.

Charles Square, Hoxton, February 18, 1782. House they are holder in think the design of the plant of

If the in the legice of the country we are say say that you have an additional form of the country of the count

And more interest that deally you are lifted with the second of the seco

CONTENTS.

(١٨١٨ - ١٠٠٠ - ١٠٠١	Page
TABLE TALK	1
Progress of Error	41
Truth	73
Expostulation	103
Hope	140
Charity	180
Conversation	212
Retirement	258
The Doves	299
A Fable	302
A Comparison	304
Verses, supposed to be written by Alexander Sel-	The
kirk, during bis solitary Abode in the Island	white.
of Juan Fernandes	305
On the Promotion of EDWARD THURLOW, Esq.	hank.
to the Lord High Chancellorship of England -	309
Ode to Peace	310
Human Frailty	3ir
The Modern Patriot	313
On observing some Names of little Note recorded in the BIOGRAPHIA BRITANNICA -	314
Report of an adjudged Case, not to be found in any	Til
of the Books	315

CONTENTS.

		Page
On the burning of Lord Mansfield's Library, to ther with his MSS. by the Mob, in June 17	80	318
On the same	-	319
The Love of the World reproved; or Hypotry	io
detected		320
The Lily and the Rose	-	322
Idem Latine Redditum		324
The Nightingale and Glow-worm	-	326
Votum	-	328
On a Goldfinch starved to Death in a Cage	-	329
Horace, Book the 2d, Ode the 10th -	-	332
A Reflection on the foregoing Ode -	-	334
Translations from Vincent Bourne	-	335
The Shrubbery		344
The Winter Nofegay	-	346
Mutual Forbearance	-	347
To the Reverend Mr. Newton -	-	351
Translation of Prior's Chloe and Euphelia	-	353
Boadicea	45	354
Heroism	-	357
The Poet, the Oyster, and the Sensitive Plant	-1	362
To the Rev. Mr. William Cawthorn Unwin	1	366

Brings down the warriog's troping to the duft,
And eats into his bloody found like ruft,

And never meant the role flexild be applied

To ifing that lights with judge on his fide.

Reward his mem'ry, dear to cy'ry mule;

Let laurele, drench'd in pure l'armatique

Tis to the vienes of face nice, man owes

TABLE TALK.

ZJAT BJEAT

Who, with a courage of unihalisa soot,

Si te forte meæ gravis uret sarcina chartæ,

Abjicito. Hor. Lib. I. Epist. 13.

A. You told me, I remember, glory, built
On selfish principles, is shame and guilt;
The deeds, that men admire as half divine,
Stark naught, because corrupt in their design.
Strange doctrine this! that without scruple tears
The laurel that the very lightning spares;

VOL. I.

B

Brings down the warrior's trophy to the duft, And eats into his bloody sword like ruft.

B. I grant that, men continuing what they are, Fierce, avaricious, proud, there must be war.

And never meant the rule should be applied

To him that fights with justice on his side.

Let laurels, drench'd in pure Parnassian dews,
Reward his mem'ry, dear to ev'ry muse,
Who, with a courage of unshaken root,
In honour's field advancing his firm foot,
Plants it upon the line that justice draws,
And will prevail or perish in her cause.
'Tis to the virtues of such men, man owes
His portion in the good that heaven bestows.
And, when recording history displays
Feats of renown, though wrought in ancient days;
Tells of a sew stout hearts that sought and died
Where duty plac'd them, at their country's side;
The man that is not mov'd with what he reads,
That takes not fire at their heroic deeds,

Unworthy of the bleffings of the brave, with a large and ob again.

But let eternal infamy purfue of a mor gaintenant The wretch to nought but his ambition true, it of w Who, for the fake of filling with one blaft ... The post-horns of all Europe, lays her waste. Think yourfelf flation'd on a tow'ring rock, To fee a people fcatter'd like a flock, Some royal mastiff panting at their heels, With all the favage thirst a tyger feels; Then view him, felf-proclaim'd in a gazette Chief monster that has plagu'd the nations yet: The globe and sceptre in such hands misplac'd, Those ensigns of dominion, how disgrac'd! The glass that bids man mark the fleeting hour, And death's own fcythe, would better fpeak his pow'r; Then grace the bony phantom in their stead With the king's shoulder-knot and gay cockade; Clothe the twin brethren in each other's dress, The same their occupation and success.

A. 'Tis your belief the world was made for man; Kings do but reason on the self same plan:

Maintaining your's, you cannot their's condemn,

Who think, or seem to think, man made for them.

B. Seldom, alas! the pow'r of logic reigns
With much sufficiency in royal brains;
Such reas'ning falls like an inverted cone,
Wanting its proper base to stand upon.
Man made for kings! those optics are but dim
That tell you so—say, rather, they for him.
That were indeed a king-ennobling thought,
Could they, or would they, reason as they ought.
The diadem, with mighty projects lin'd,
To catch renown by ruining mankind,
Is worth, with all its gold and glitt'ring store,
Just what the toy will sell for, and no more.

Oh! bright occasions of dispensing good,

How seldom used, how little understood!

To pour in virtue's lap her just reward,

Keep vice restrain'd behind a double guard;

To quell the faction that affronts the throne By filent magnanimity alone; and I among the off of I To nurse with tender care the thriving arts, Watch every beam philosophy imparts; watch and and To give religion her unbridled scope, Nor judge by statute a believer's hope; With close fidelity and love unfeign'd, To keep the matrimonial bond unstain'd; Covetous only of a virtuous praise; His life a lesson to the land he sways; To touch the fword with conscientious awe, Nor draw it but when duty bids him draw; To sheath it in the peace-restoring close With joy beyond what victory bestows; Bleft country, where these kingly glories shine! Bleft England, if this happiness be thine!

A. Guard what you say; the patriotic tribe

Will sneer and charge you with a bribe.—B. A bribe?

The worth of his three kingdoms I defy,

To lure me to the baseness of a lie.

And, of all lies, (be that one poet's boast)

The lie that flatters I abhor the most.

Those arts be their's who hate his gentle reign,

But he that loves him has no need to seign.

A. Your smooth eulogium, to one crown address'd, Seems to imply a censure on the rest.

B. Quevedo, as he tells his fober tale,
Ask'd, when in hell, to see the royal jail;
Approv'd their method in all other things;
But where, good sir, do you consine your kings?
There—said his guide—the group is full in view.
Indeed?—replied the Don—there are but sew.
His black interpreter the charge disdain'd—
Few, sellow?—there are all that ever reign'd.
Wit, undistinguishing, is apt to strike
The guilty and not guilty, both alike.
I grant the sarcasm is too severe,
And we can readily resute it here;
While Alfred's name, the father of his age,
And the Sixth Edward's grace th' historic page.

A. Kings then at last have but the lot of all,

By their own conduct they must stand or fall.

B. True. While they live, the courtly laureat pays
His quit-rent ode, his pepper-corn of praise;
And many a dunce, whose fingers itch to write,
Adds, as he can, his tributary mite:
A subject's faults a subject may proclaim,
A monarch's errors are forbidden game!
Thus, free from censure, over-aw'd by sear,
And prais'd for virtues that they scorn to wear,
The sleeting forms of majesty engage
Respect, while stalking o'er life's narrow stage;
Then leave their crimes for history to scan,
And ask with busy scorn, Was this the man?

I pity kings whom worship waits upon,
Obsequious, from the cradle to the throne;
Before whose infant eyes the flatt'rer bows,
And binds a wreath about their baby brows;
Whom education stiffens into state,
And death awakens from that dream too late.

Oh! if fervility with supple knees,

Whose trade it is to smile, to crouch, to please;

If smooth dissimulation, skill'd to grace

A devil's purpose with an angel's face;

If smiling peeresses and simp'ring peers,

Encompassing his throne a sew short years;

If the gilt carriage and the pamper'd steed,

That wants no driving, and disclains the lead;

If guards, mechanically form'd in ranks,

Playing, at beat of drum, their martial pranks,

Should'ring and standing as if stuck to stone,

While condescending majesty looks on;

If monarchy consist in such base things,

Sighing, I say again, I pity kings!

To be suspected, thwarted, and withstood,

Ev'n when he labours for his country's good;

To see a band, called patriot, for no cause,

But that they catch at popular applause,

Careless of all th' anxiety he seels,

Hook disappointment on the public wheels;

With all their flippant fluency of tongue, and The Most confident, when palpably most wrong; If this be kingly, then farewell for me All kingship; and may I be poor and free! To be the Table Talk of clubs up stairs, To which th' unwash'd artificer repairs, T'indulge his genius after long fatigue, By diving into cabinet intrigue; (For what kings deem a toil, as well they may, To him is relaxation and mere play) To win no praise when well-wrought plans prevail, But to be rudely cenfur'd when they fail; To doubt the love his fav'riles may pretend, And in reality to find no friend; and you mind though If he indulge a cultivated tafte, His gall'ries with the works of art well grac'd, To hear it call'd extravagance and waste; If these attendants, and if such as these, Must follow royalty, then welcome ease; However humble and confin'd the sphere,

Happy the state that has not these to fear.

A. Thus men, whose thoughts contemplative have dwelt.

On situations that they never selt,

Start up sagacious, covered with the dust

Of dreaming study and pedantic rust,

And prate and preach about what others prove,

As if the world and they were hand and glove.

Leave kingly backs to cope with kingly cares;

They have their weight to carry, subjects their's;

Poets, of all men, ever least regret

Increasing taxes and the nation's debt.

Could you contrive the payment, and rehearse

The mighty plan, oracular, in verse,

No bard, howe'er majestic, old or new,

Should claim my fixt attention more than you.

B. Not Brindley nor Bridgewater would essay

To turn the course of Helicon that way;

Nor would the nine consent the sacred tide

Should purl amidst the traffic of Cheapside,

Or tinkle in 'Change Alley, to amuse

The leathern ears of stock-jobbers and jews.

A. Vouchsafe, at least, to pitch the key of rhyme To themes more pertinent, if less sublime. When ministers and ministerial arts; Patriots, who love good places at their hearts; When admirals, extoll'd for standing still, Or doing nothing with a deal of skill; Gen'rals, who will not conquer when they may, Firm friends to peace, to pleasure, and good pay; When freedom, wounded almost to despair, Though discontent alone can find out where; When themes like these employ the poet's tongue. I hear as mute as if a fyren fung. Or tell me, if you can, what pow'r maintains A Britain's fcorn of arbitrary chains? That were a theme might animate the dead, And move the lips of poets cast in lead.

B. The cause, tho' worth the search, may yet elude Conjecture and remark, however shrewd.

They take, perhaps, a well-directed aim,

Who seek it in his climate and his frame.

Lib'ral in all things else, yet nature here With stern severity deals out the year. Winter invades the spring, and often pours A chilling flood on fummer's drooping flow'rs; Unwelcome vapours quench autumnal beams, Ungenial blafts attending, curl the streams; The peasants urge their harvest, ply the fork With double toil, and shiver at their work; Thus with a rigour, for his good design'd, She rears her fav'rite man of all mankind. His form robust and of elastic tone, Proportion'd well, half muscle and half bone, Supplies with warm activity and force A mind well lodg'd, and masculine of course. Hence liberty, fweet liberty inspires, And keeps alive, his fierce but noble fires. Patient of constitutional controul, He bears it with meek manliness of soul; But, if authority grow wanton, woe To him that treads upon his free-born toe;

One step beyond the bound'ry of the laws

Fires him at once in freedom's glorious cause.

Thus proud prerogative, not much rever'd,

Is seldom felt, though sometimes seen and heard;

And in his cage, like parrot fine and gay,

Is kept, to strut, look big, and talk away.

Born in a climate foster far than our's,

Not form'd like us, with such Herculean pow'rs,

The Frenchman, easy, debonair, and brisk,

Give him his lass, his siddle, and his frisk,

Is always happy, reign whoever may,

And laughs the sense of mis'ry far away:

He drinks his simple bev'rage with a gust;

And, seasting on an onion and a crust,

We never feel th' alacrity and joy

With which he shouts and carols, Vive le Roy,

Fill'd with as much true merriment and glee,

As if he heard his king say—Slave, be free.

Thus happiness depends, as nature shows, Less on exterior things than most suppose. Vigilant over all that he has made,

Kind Providence attends with gracious aid;

Bids equity throughout his works prevail,

And weighs the nations in an even scale;

He can encourage slav'ry to a smile,

And fill with discontent a British isle.

A. Freeman and flave, then, if the case be such,
Stand on a level; and you prove too much:
If all men indiscriminately share
His fost'ring pow'r, and tutelary care,
As well be yok'd by despotism's hand,
As dwell at large in Britain's charter'd land.

B. No. Freedom has a thousand charms to show,
That slaves, howe'er contented, never know.
The mind attains, beneath her happy reign,
The growth that nature meant she should attain;
The varied fields of science, ever new,
Op'ning and wider op'ning on her view,
She ventures onward with a prosp'rous force,
While no base fear impedes her in her course:

Religion, richeft favour of the fkies, Stands most reveal'd before the freeman's eyes; No shades of superstition blot the day, Liberty chases all that gloom away; The foul, emancipated, unoppress'd, Free to prove all things and hold fast the best, Learns much; and to a thousand list ning minds, Communicates with joy the good she finds: Courage in arms, and ever pompt to flow His manly forehead to the fiercest foe; Glorious in war, but for the fake of peace, His spirits rising as his toils increase, Guards well what arts and industry have won, And freedom claims him for her first-born fon. Slaves fight for what were better cast away— The chain that binds them, and a tyrant's fway; But they, that fight for freedom, undertake The noblest cause mankind can have at stake:-Religion, virtue, truth, whate'er we call A bleffing-freedom is the pledge of all.

Oh liberty! the pris'ner's pleasing dream,
The poet's muse, his passion and his theme;
Genius is thine, and thou art fancy's nurse;
Lost without thee th' ennobling pow'rs of verse;
Heroic song from thy free touch acquires
Its clearest tone, the rapture it inspires;
Place me where winter breathes his keenest air,
And I will sing, if liberty be there;
And I will sing, at liberty's dear seet,
In Afric's torrid clime, or India's siercest heat.

A. Sing where you please, in such a cause, I grant
An English poet's privilege to rant;
But is not freedom—at least, is not our's
Too apt to play the wanton with her pow'rs,
Grow freakish, and, o'erleaping ev'ry mound,
Spread anarchy and terror all around?

B. Agreed. But would you fell or flay your horse.

For bounding and curvetting in his course;

Or if, when ridden with a careless rein,

He break away, and seek the distant plain?

No. His high metal, under good controul, A control Gives him Olympic speed, and shoots him to the goal.

Let discipline employ her wholesome arts; Let magistrates alert perform their parts, Not skulk or put on a prudential mask, As if their duty were a desp'rate task, Let active laws apply the needful curb To guard the peace that riot would diffurb; And liberty, preferv'd from wild excess, Shall raise no feuds for armies to suppress. When rumult lately burst his prison door, And fet plebeian thousands in a roar; When he usurp'd authority's just place, And dar'd to look his mafter in the face; When the rude rabble's watch-word was-destroy, And blazing London feem'd a fecond Troy; Liberty blush'd, and hung her drooping head, Beheld their progress with the deepest dread; Blush'd, that effects like these she should produce, Worse than the deeds of galley-flaves broke loose. VOL. I.

t

5.3

0

18

C

She loses in such storms her very name,

And sierce licentiousness should bear the blame.

Incomparable gem! thy worth untold;

Cheap, though blood-bought; and thrown away when fold;

May no foes ravish thee, and no false friend
Betray thee, while professing to defend;
Prize it, ye ministers; ye monarchs, spare;
Ye patriots, guard it with a miser's care.

A. Patriots, alas! the few that have been found,
Where most they flourish, upon English ground,
The country's need have scantily supplied,
And the last left the scene when Chatham died.

B. Not so—the virtue still adorns our age,
Though the chief actor died upon the stage.
In him Demosthenes was heard again;
Liberty taught him her Athenian strain;
She cloth'd him with authority and awe,
Spoke from his lips, and in his looks gave law.
His speech, his form, his action, full of grace,
And all his country beaming in his face,

He stood, as some inimitable hand

Would strive to make a Paul or Tully stand.

No sycophant or slave, that dar'd oppose

Her sacred cause, but trembled when he rose;

And ev'ry venal stickler for the yoke

Felt himself crushed at the first word he spoke.

Such men are rais'd to station and command,
When Providence means mercy to a land.
He speaks, and they appear; to him they owe
Skill to direct, and strength to strike the blow;
To manage with address, to seize with pow'r,
The criss of a dark decisive hour.
So Gideon earn'd a vict'ry not his own;
Subserviency his praise, and that alone.

Poor England! thou art a devoted deer,

Beset with ev'ry ill but that of sear.

The nations hunt; all mark thee for a prey;

They swarm around thee, and thou stand'st at bay.

Undaunted still, though wearied and perplex'd,

Once Chatham sav'd thee; but who saves thee next?

Alas! the tide of pleasure sweeps along All that should be the boast of British song. 'Tis not the wreath that once adorn'd thy brow, The prize of happier times, will ferve thee now. Our ancestry; a gallant christian race, Patterns of ev'ry virtue, ev'ry grace, Confess'd a God; they kneel'd before they fought, And prais'd him in the victories he wrought. Now from the dust of antient days bring forth Their fober zeal, integrity, and worth; Courage, ungrac'd by these, affronts the skies, Is but the fire without the facrifice. The stream that feeds the well-spring of the heart Not more invigorates life's noblest part, Than virtue quickens, with a warmth divine, The pow'rs that fin has brought to a decline.

A. Th' inestimable estimate of Brown

Rose like a paper-kite, and charm'd the town;

But measures, plann'd and executed well,

Shifted the wind that rais'd it, and it fell.

He trod the very self-same ground you tread,

And victory resuted all he said.

B. And yet his judgment was not fram'd amis;

Its error, if it err'd, was merely this—

He thought the dying hour already come,

And a complete recov'ry struck him dumb.

But that effeminacy, folly, lust,

Enervate and enseeble, and needs must,

And that a nation shamefully debas'd,

Will be despis'd and trampled on at last,

Unless sweet penitence her pow'rs renew,

Is truth, if history itself be true.

There is a time, and justice marks the date,

For long-forbearing elemency to wait;

That hour elaps'd, th' incurable revolt

Is punish'd, and down comes the thunder-bolt.

If mercy then put by the threat'ning blow,

Must she perform the same kind office now?

May she! and, if offended heav'n be still

Accessible, and pray'r prevail, she will,

'Tis not, however, infolence and noise,

The tempest of tumultuary joys,

Nor is it, yet, despondence and dismay,

Will win her visits or engage her stay;

Pray'r only, and the penitential tear,

Can call her smiling down, and six her here.

But, when a country (one that I could name)
In profitution finks the fense of shame;
When infamous venality, grown bold,
Writes on his bosom, to be let or fold;
When perjury, that heav'n defying vice,
Sells oaths by tale, and at the lowest price,
Stamps God's own name upon a lie just made,
To turn a penny in the way of trade;
When av'rice starves (and never hides his face)
Two or three millions of the human race,
And not a tongue inquires, how, where, or when,
Though conscience will have twinges now and then;
When profanation of the facred cause
In all its parts, times, ministry, and laws,

Bespeaks a land, once christian, fail'n, and lost
In all that wars against that title most;
What follows next let cities of great name,
And regions long since desolate, proclaim.
Nineveh, Babylon, and antient Rome,
Speak to the present times, and times to come;
They ery aloud in ev'ry careless ear,
Stop, while ye may; suspend your mad career;
O learn, from our example and our fate,
Learn wisdom and repentance ere too late,

Not only vice disposes and prepares

The mind, that slumbers sweetly in her snares,

To stoop to tyranny's usurp'd command,

And bend her polish'd neck beneath his hand

(A dire effect, by one of nature's laws

Unchangeably connected with its cause);

But Providence himself will intervene

To throw his dark displeasure o'er the scene.

All are his instruments; each form of war,

What burns at home, or threatens from afar,

Nature in arms, her elements at strife, The storms that overset the joys of life, Are but his rods to fcourge a guilty land, And waste it at the bidding of his hand. He gives the word, and mutiny foon roars In all her gates, and shakes her distant shores; The standards of all nations are unfurl'd; She has one foe, and that one foe the world. And, if he doom that people with a frown, And mark them with a feal of wrath press'd down, Obduracy takes place; callous and tough, The reprobated race grows judgment proof: Earth shakes beneath them and heav'n roars above; But nothing scares them from the course they love; To the lascivious pipe and wanton fong, That charm down fear, they frolic it along, With mad rapidity and unconcern, Down to the gulf from which is no return. They trust in navies, and their navies fail-God's curse can cast away ten thousand fail!

They trust in armies, and their courage dies;
In wisdom, wealth, in fortune, and in lies;
But all they trust in withers, as it must,
When He commands, in whom they place no trust.
Vengeance at last pours down upon their coast
A long despis'd, but now victorious, host;
Tyranny sends the chain that must abridge
The noble sweep of all their privilege;
Gives liberty the last, the mortal shock;
Slips the slave's collar on, and snaps the lock.

A. Such lofty strains embellish what you teach, Mean you to prophely, or but to preach?

B. I know the mind that feels indeed the fire

The muse imparts, and can command the lyre,

Acts with a force, and kindles with a zeal,

Whate'er the theme, that others never feel.

If human woes her soft attention claim,

A tender sympathy pervades the frame,

She pours a sensibility divine

Along the nerve of ev'ry seeling line.

But, if a deed not tamely to be born Fire indignation and a fense of scorn, The strings are swept with such a pow'r so loud, The ftorm of music shakes th' astonish'd crowd. So, when remote futurity is brought Before the keen inquiry of her thought, A terrible fagacity informs The poet's heart; he looks to distant storms; He hears the thunder ere the tempest low'rs; And, arm'd with strength surpassing human pow'rs, Seizes events as yet unknown to man, And darts his foul into the dawning plan. Hence, in a Roman mouth, the graceful name Of prophet and of poet was the fame; Hence British poets, too, the priesthood shar'd, And ev'ry hallow'd druid was a bard. But no prophetic fires to me belong; I play with fyllables, and fport in fong.

A. At Westminster, where little poets strive
To set a distich upon six and sive,

Where discipline helps op'ning buds of sense,
And makes his pupils proud with silver-pence,
I was a poet too: but modern taste
Is so refin'd, and delicate, and chaste,
That verse, whatever fire the fancy warms,
Without a creamy smoothness has no charms.
Thus, all success depending on an ear,
And thinking I might purchase it too dear,
If sentiment were sacrific'd to sound,
And truth cut short to make a period round,
I judg'd a man of sense could scarce do worse.

Than caper in the morris-dance of verse.

B. Thus reputation is a spur to wit,

And some wits stag through sear of losing it.

Give me the line that plows its stately course

Like a proud swan, conq'ring the stream by sorce;

That, like some cottage beauty, strikes the heart,

Quite unindebted to the tricks of art.

When labour and when dullness, club in hand,

Like the two sigures at St. Dunstan's, stand,

Beating alternately, in measur'd time,

The clock-work tintinabulum of rhime,

Exact and regular the founds will be;

But such mere quarter-strokes are not for me.

From him who rears a poem lank and long,
To him who strains his all into a song;
Perhaps some bonny Caledonian air,
All birks and braes, though he was never there;
Or, having whelp'd a prologue with great pains,
Feels himself spent, and sumbles for his brains;
A prologue interdash'd with many a stroke—
An art contriv'd to advertise a joke,
So that the jest is clearly to be seen,
Not in the words—but in the gap between:
Manner is all in all, whate'er is writ,
The substitute for genius, sense, and wit.

Proves that the mind is weak, or makes it fo.

Neglected talents ruft into decay,

And ev'ry effort ends in push-pin play.

The man that means success should soar above

A soldier's feather, or a lady's glove;

Else, summoning the muse to such a theme,

The fruit of all her labour is whipt-cream.

As if an eagle slew alost, and then—

Stoop'd from its highest pitch to pounce a wren.

As if the poet, purposing to wed,

Should carve himself a wife in gingerbread.

Ages elaps'd ere Homer's lamp appear'd,
And ages ere the Mantuan swan was heard:
To carry nature lengths unknown before,
To give a Milton birth, ask'd ages more.
Thus genius rose and set at order'd times,
And shot a day-spring into distant climes,
Ennobling ev'ry region that he chose;
He sunk in Greece, in Italy he rose;
And, tedious years of Gothic darkness pass'd,
Emerg'd all splendour in our isle at last.
Thus lovely halcyons dive into the main,
Then show far off their shining plumes again.

A. Is genius only found in epic lays?

Prove this, and forfeit all pretence to praise.

Make their heroic pow'rs your own at once,

Or candidly confess yourfelf a dunce.

B. These were the chies: each interval of night Was grac'd with many an undulating light.

In less illustrious bards his beauty shone
A meteor, or a star; in these, the sun.

The nightingale may claim the topmost bough, While the poor grashopper must chirp below:
Like him, unnotic'd, I, and such as I,
Spread little wings, and rather skip than sty;
Perch'd on the meagre produce of the land,
An ell or two of prospect we command;
But never peep beyond the thorny bound,
Or oaken sence, that hems the paddoc round.

In Eden, ere yet innocence of heart
Had faded, poetry was not an art;
Language, above all teaching, or, if taught,
Only by gratitude and glowing thought,

Elegant as simplicity, and warm As ecftafy, unmanacled by form, Not prompted, as in our degen'rate days, By low ambition and the thirst of praise, Was natural as is the flowing stream, And yet magnificent—a God the theme! That theme on earth exhaufted, though above 'Tis found as everlasting as his love, Man lavish'd all his thoughts on human things-The feats of heroes, and the wrath of kings: But still, while virtue kindled his delight, The fong was moral, and fo far was right. 'Twas thus till luxury seduc'd the mind To joys less innocent, as less refin'd; Then genius dane'd a bacchanal; he crown'd The brimming goblet, feiz'd the thyrfus, bound His brows with ivy, rush'd into the field Of wild imagination, and there reel'd, The victim of his own lascivious fires, And, dizzy with delight, profan'd the facred wires.

Anacreon, Horace, play'd in Greece and Rome This Bedlam part; and others nearer home. When Cromwell fought for pow'r, and while he reign'd The proud protector of the pow'r he gain'd, Religion harsh, intolerant, austere, Parent of manners like herfelf fevere, Drew a rough copy of the Christian face Without the smile, the sweetness, or the grace; The dark and fullen humour of the time Judg'd ev'ry effort of the muse a crime; Verse, in the finest mould of fancy cast, Was lumber in an age fo void of taste: But, when the fecond Charles affum'd the fway, And arts reviv'd beneath a fofter day, Then, like a bow long forc'd into a curve, The mind, releas'd from too constrain'd a nerve, Flew to its first position with a spring That made the vaulted roofs of pleasure ring. His court, the diffolute and hateful school Of wantonness, where vice was taught by rule,

Swarm'd with a scribbling herd, as deep inlaid

With brutal lust as ever Circe made.

From these a long succession, in the rage

Of rank obscenity, debauch'd their age;

Nor ceas'd, 'till, ever anxious to redress

Th' abuses of her sacred charge, the press,

The muse instructed a well nurtur'd train

Of abler votaries to cleanse the stain,

And claim the palm for purity of song,

That lewdness had usurp'd and worn so long.

Then decent pleasantry and sterling sense,

That neither gave nor would endure offence,

Whipp'd out of sight, with satire just and keen,

The puppy pack that had defil'd the scene.

In front of these came Addison. In him

Humour in holiday and sightly trim,

Sublimity and attic taste, combin'd,

To polish, furnish, and delight, the mind.

Then Pope, as harmony itself exact,

In verse well disciplin'd, complete, compact,

VOL. I.

d

That, quite eclipfing pleasure's painted face,
Levied a tax of wonder and applause,
Ev'n on the sools that trampled on their laws.
But he (his musical finesse was such,
So nice his ear, so delicate his touch)
Made poetry a mere mechanic art;
And ev'ry warbler has his tune by heart.
Nature imparting her satiric gift,
Her serious mirth, to Arbuthnot and Swist,
With droll sobriety they rais'd a smile
At solly's cost, themselves unmov'd the while.
That constellation set, the world in vain
Must hope to look upon their like again.

A. Are we then left—B. Not wholly in the dark;
Wit now and then, struck smartly, shows a spark,
Sufficient to redeem the modern race
From total night and absolute disgrace.
While servile trick and imitative knack
Confine the million in the beaten track,

Perhaps some courser, who disdains the road, Snuffs up the wind, and slings himself abroad.

Contemporaries all furpass'd, see one; Short his career, indeed, but ably run; Churchill; himself unconscious of his pow'rs, In penury confum'd his idle hours; And, like a scatter'd feed at random fown, Was left to fpring by vigour of his own. Lifted at length, by dignity of thought And dint of genius, to an affluent lot, He laid his head in luxury's foft lap, And took, too often, there his easy nap. If brighter beams than all he threw not forth, 'Twas negligence in him, not want of worth. Surly and flovenly, and bold and coarfe, Too proud for art, and trufting in mere force, Spendthrift alike of money and of wit, Always at speed, and never drawing bit, He struck the lyre in such a careless mood, And so disdain'd the rules he understood,

The laurel feem'd to wait on his command; He fnatch'd it rudely from the muses' hand. Nature, exerting an unwearied pow'r, Forms, opens, and gives fcent to, ev'ry flow'r; Spreads the fresh verdure of the field, and leads The dancing Naiads through the dewy meads: She fills profuse ten thousand little throats With music, modulating all their notes; And charms the woodland scenes, and wilds unknown, With artless airs and concerts of her own: But feldom (as if fearful of expense) Vouchsafes to man a poet's just pretence-Fervency, freedom, fluency of thought, Harmony, strength, words exquisitely fought; Fancy, that from the bough that spans the sky Brings colours, dipt in heav'n, that never die; A foul exalted above earth, a mind Skill'd in the characters that form mankind; And, as the fun in rising beauty dress'd, Looks to the westward from the dappled east,

And marks, whatever clouds may interpose, Ere yet his race begins, its glorious close; An eye like his to catch the distant goal; Or, ere the wheels of verse begin to roll, Like his to fhed illuminating rays On ev'ry scene and subject it surveys: Thus grac'd, the man afferts a poet's name, And the world cheerfully admits the claim. Pity religion has fo feldom found A skilful guide into poetic ground! The flow'rs would fpring where'er she deign'd to stray, And ev'ry muse attend her in her way. Virtue indeed meets many a rhiming friend, And many a compliment politely penn'd; But, unattir'd in that becoming vest Religion weaves for her, and half undress'd, Stand in the defert, shiv'ring and forlorn, A wintry figure, like a wither'd thorn, The shelves are full, all other themes are sped; Hackney'd and worn to the last slimfy thread,

Satire has long fince done his best; and curst
And loathsome ribaldry has done his worst;
Fancy has sported all her pow'rs away
In tales, in trisles, and in children's play;
And 'tis the sad complaint, and almost true,
Whate'er we write, we bring forth nothing new.
'Twere new indeed to see a bard all fire,
Touch'd with a coal from heav'n, assume the lyre,
And tell the world, still kindling as he sung,
With more than mortal music on his tongue,
That He, who died below, and reigns above,
Inspires the song, and that his name is love.

For, after all, if merely to beguile,

By flowing numbers and a flow'ry style,

The tædium that the lazy rich endure,

Which now and then sweet poetry may cure;

Or, if to see the name of idle self,

Stamp'd on the well-bound quarto, grace the shelf,

To float a bubble on the breath of same,

Prompt his endeavour, and engage his aim,

Debas'd to servile purposes of pride,

How are the pow'rs of genius misapplied!

The gift, whose office is the Giver's praise,

To trace him in his word, his works, his ways!

Then spread the rich discov'ry, and invite

Mankind to share in the divine delight.

Distorted from its use and just design,

To make the pitiful possessor shine,

To purchase, at the sool-frequented fair

Of vanity, a wreath for self to wear,

Is profanation of the basest kind—

Proof of a trisling and a worthless mind.

A. Hail Sternhold, then; and Hopkins, hail! B. Amen.

If flatt'ry, folly, lust, employ the pen;

If acrimony, slander, and abuse,

Give it a charge to blacken and traduce;

Though Butler's wit, Pope's numbers, Prior's ease,

With all that fancy can invent to please,

Adorn the polish'd periods as they fall,

One madrigal of their's is worth them all.

- A. 'Twould thin the ranks of the poetic tribe,'
 To dash the pen through all that you proscribe.
- B. No matter—we could shift when they were not; And should, no doubt, if they were all forgot.

Manipal of the Cart of Call in Cartain

Distance From its site as structual de land.

To purchase, at the feet-St & sented Pair

Proof of a ralling and a surficiel mied.

A-first ever folly, Juff, encoloy styl pen early

With the that finey can inventito pleake.

Adorn the politic digories as exp. 1-11-

One madelgal of their is worth them all.

If acrimours shander, seed abole,

Mind and Greenhold there and Hoplans, ball

Though Butler's win I open auchbrish Palor's cale,

And wholes being set take of Offwariay, a wall for all to sale.

is 'profession of the best ledded--

car before freed the rac

Lake my ye cons. ye karelels sud freeles

Counted and opinion from any its live more

"Not all, while cloquences bleact file...

aring a red in Agent man in the installant

Differing high the work makes the free for the

TORRESHOUR SAROES

PROGRESS OF ERROR.

Si quid loquar audiendum. Hor. Lib. 4. Od. 2.

Sing, muse, (if such a theme, so dark, so long,
May find a muse to grace it with a song)
By what unseen and unsuspected arts
The serpent error twines round human hearts;
Tell where she lurks, beneath what slow'ry shades,
That not a glimpse of genuine light pervades,
The pois'nous, black, insinuating worm
Successfully conceals her loathsome form.

Take, if ye can, ye careless and supine,

Counsel and caution from a voice like mine!

Truths, that the theorist could never reach,

And observation taught me, I would teach.

Not all, whose eloquence the fancy fills,
Musical as the chime of tinkling rills,
Weak to perform, though mighty to pretend,
Can trace her mazy windings to their end;
Discern the fraud beneath the specious lure,
Prevent the danger, or prescribe the cure.
The clear harangue, and cold as it is clear,
Falls soporific on the listless ear;
Like quicksilver, the rhet'ric they display
Shines as it runs, but, grasp'd at, slips away.

Plac'd for his trial on this buftling stage,

From thoughtless youth to ruminating age,

Free in his will to choose or to refuse,

Man may improve the criss, or abuse;

Else, on the fatalists unrighteous plan,

Say, to what bar amenable were man?

With nought in charge, he could betray no truft; And, if he fell, would fall because he must; If love reward him, or if vengeance strike, His recompense is both unjust alike. Divine authority within his breast Brings ev'ry thought, word, action, to the test; Warns him or prompts, approves him or reftrains, As reason, or as passion, takes the reins. Heav'n from above, and conscience from within, Cries in his startled ear-Abstain from fin! The world around folicits his defire, And kindles in his foul a treach'rous fire; While, all his purposes and steps to guard, Peace follows virtue, as its fure reward; And pleasure brings as furely in her train Remorfe, and forrow, and vindictive pain. Man, thus endued with an elective voice, Must be supplied with objects of his choice.

Where'er he turns, enjoyment and delight,

Or present, or in prospect, meet his fight;

Those open on the spot their honey'd store;
These call him loudly to pursuit of more.
His unexhausted mine the sordid vice
Avarice shows, and virtue is the price.
Here various motives his ambition raise—
Pow'r, pomp, and splendour, and the thirst of praise;
There beauty woos him with expanded arms;
E'en Bacchanalian madness has its charms.

Nor these alone, whose pleasures, less refin'd, Might well alarm the most unguarded mind, Seek to supplant his inexperienc'd youth, Or lead him devious from the path of truth; Hourly allurements on his passions press, Sase in themselves, but dang'rous in th' excess.

Hark! how it floats upon the dewy air!

O what a dying, dying close was there!

'Tis harmony from you sequester'd bow'r,

Sweet harmony, that sooths the midnight hour!

Long ere the charioteer of day had run

His morning course, th' enchantment was begun;

And he shall gild you mountain's height again,

Ere yet the pleasing toil becomes a pain.

Is this the rugged path, the steep ascent,

That virtue points to? Can a life thus spent

Lead to the bliss she promises the wise,

Detach the soul from earth, and speed her to the skies?

Ye devotees to your ador'd employ,

Enthusiasts, drunk with an unreal joy,

Love makes the music of the blest above,

Heav'n's harmony is universal love;

And earthly sounds, though sweet and well combin'd,

And lenient as soft opiates to the mind,

Leave vice and folly unsubdu'd behind.

Gray dawn appears; the sportsman and his train

Speckle the bosom of the distant plain;

'Tis he, the Nimrod of the neighb'ring lairs;

Save that his scent is less acute than their's,

For persevering chase, and headlong leaps,

True beagle as the staunchest hound he keeps.

Charg'd with the folly of his life's mad scene,

He takes offence, and wonders what you mean;

The joy the danger and the toil o'erpays—
'Tis exercise, and health, and length of days.

Again impetuous to the field he flies;

Leaps ev'ry sence but one, there falls and dies;

Like a slain deer, the tumbrel brings him home,

Unmis'd but by his dogs and by his groom.

Ye clergy; while your orbit is your place,
Lights of the world, and stars of human race;
But, if eccentric ye forsake your sphere,
Prodigies ominous, and view'd with sear.
The comet's baneful influence is a dream;
Your's real, and pernicious in th' extreme.
What then !—are appetites and lusts laid down,
With the same ease that man puts on his gown?
Will av'rice and concupiscence give place,
Charm'd by the sounds—Your Rev'rence, or Your Grace?

No. But his own engagement binds him fast;
Or, if it does not, brands him to the last,
What atheists call him—a designing knave,
A mere church juggler, hypocrite, and slave.

Oh, laugh or mourn with me the rueful jest,

A cassock'd huntsman and a siddling priest!

He from Italian songsters takes his cue:

Set Paul to musse, he shall quote him too.

He takes the field. The master of the pack

Cries—Well done, saint! and claps him on the back.

Is this the path of sanctity? Is this

To stand a way-mark in the road to bliss?

Himself a wand'rer from the narrow way,

His silly sheep, what wonder if they stray?

Go, cast your orders at your bishop's feet,

Send your dishonour'd gown to Monmouth-street!

The sacred function in your hands is made—

Sad facrilege!—no function, but a trade!

Occiduus is a pastor of renown,

When he has pray'd and preach'd the sabbath down,

With wire and catgut he concludes the day,

Quav'ring and semiquav'ring care away.

The full concerto swells upon your ear;

All elbows shake. Look in, and you would swear

The Babylonian tyrant with a nod

Had fummon'd them to ferve his golden god.

So well that thought th' employment feems to fuit,

Pfalt'ry and fackbut, dulcimer, and flute.

Oh fie! 'tis evangelical and pure:

Observe each face, how sober and demure!

Ecstasy fets her stamp on ev'ry mien;

Chins fall'n, and not an eye-ball to be seen.

Still I insist, though music heretosore

Has charm'd me much, (not e'en Occiduus more)

Love, joy, and peace, make harmony more meet

For sabbath ev'nings, and perhaps as sweet.

Will not the ficklieft sheep of every slock
Resort to this example as a rock;
There stand, and justify the soul abuse
Of sabbath hours with plausible excuse?
If apostolic gravity be free
To play the sool on Sundays, why not we?
If he the tinkling harpsichord regards
As inoffensive, what offence in cards?

Strike up the fiddles, let us all be gay I in dia about

Laymen have leave to dance, if parfons play.

Oh Italy !- thy fabbaths will be foon and and and and

Our fabbaths, clos'd with mumm'ry and buffoon.

Preaching and pranks will share the motley scene:

Our's parcell'd out, as thine have ever been,

God's worship and the mountebank between.

What fays the prophet? Let that day be bleft

With holiness and consecrated reft.

Pastime and bus'ness both it should exclude,

And bar the door the moment they intrude;

Nobly diftinguish'd above all the fix,

By deeds in which the world must never mix.

Hear him again. He calls it a delight,

A day of luxury, observ'd aright, and a more mid to I

When the glad foul is made heav'n's welcome guest,

Sits banqueting, and God provides the feaft.

But triflers are engag'd and cannot come;

Their answer to the call is Not at bome.

Oh the dear pleasures of the velvet plain,

The painted tablets, dealt and dealt again.

Cards, with what rapture, and the polish'd die, The yawning chafm of indolence supply! Then to the dance, and make the fober moon Witness of joys that shun the sight of noon. Blame, cynic, if you can, quadrille or ball, The fnug close party, or the splendid hall, Where night, down-stooping from her ebon throne, Views constellations brighter than her own. 'Tis innocent, and harmless, and refin'd; The balm of care, elyfium of the mind. Innocent! Oh, if venerable time Slain at the foot of pleasure be no crime, Then, with his filver beard and magic wand, Let Comus rise archbishop of the land; Let him your rubric and your feafts prescribe, Grand metropolitan of all the tribe.

Of manners rough, and coarse athletic cast,

The rank debauch suits Clodio's filthy taste.

Rusillus, exquisitely form'd by rule,

Not of the moral, but the dancing school,

B

D

M

Re

Wonders at Clodio's follies, in a tone As tragical, as others at his own. He cannot drink five bottles, bilk the fcore, Then kill a constable, and drink five more; But he can draw a pattern, make a tart, And has the ladies etiquette by heart. Go, fool; and, arm in arm with Clodio, plead Your cause before a bar you little dread; But know, the law that bids the drunkard die Is far too just to pass the trifler by. Both baby-featur'd, and of infant fize, View'd from a diftance, and with heedless eyes, Folly and innocence are fo alike, The diffrence, though effential, fails to strike. Yet folly ever has a vacant stare, A fimp'ring count'nance, and a trifling air; But innocence, fedate, ferene, erect, Delights us, by engaging our respect. Man, nature's guest by invitation sweet, Receives from her both appetite and treat;

But, if he play the glutton and exceed,
His benefactres blushes at the deed.
For nature, nice, as lib'ral to dispense,
Made nothing but a brute the flave of sense.

Daniel ate pulse by choice—example rare!
Heav'n bles'd the youth, and made him fresh and sair.
Gorgonius sits, abdominous and wan,
Like a fat squab upon a Chinese san:
He snuffs far off th' anticipated joy;
Turtle and ven'son all his thoughts employ;
Prepares for meals as jockies take a sweat,
Oh, nauseous!—an emetic for a whet!
Will Providence o'erlook the wasted good?
Temperance were no virtue if he could.

That pleasures, therefore, or what such we call,
Are hurtful, is a truth confess'd by all.
And some, that seem to threaten virtue less,
Still hurtful, in th' abuse, or by th' excess.

Is man then only for his torment plac'd.

The centre of delights he may not taste?

Like fabled Tantalus, condemn'd to hear The precious stream fall purling in his ear, Lip-deep in what he longs for, and yet curft With prohibition, and perpetual thirst? No, wrangler-deftitute of shame and sense, The precept, that enjoins him abstinence, Forbids him none but the licentious joy, Whose fruit, though fair, tempts only to destroy. Remorfe, the fatal egg by pleafure laid In every bosom where her nest is made, Hatch'd by the beams of truth, denies him reft, And proves a raging scorpion in his breaft. No pleasure? Are domestic comforts dead? Are all the nameless sweets of friendship fled? Has time worn out, or fashion put to shame, Good sense, good health, good conscience, and good same? All these belong to virtue, and all prove That virtue has a title to your love. Have you no touch of pity, that the poor Stand starv'd at your inhospitable door?

Or, if yourfelf, too fcantily supplied, Need help, let honest industry provide. Earn, if you want; if you abound, impart: These both are pleasures to the feeling heart. No pleasure? Has some sickly eastern waste Sent us a wind to parch us at a blaft? Can British paradise no scenes afford To please her sated and indiffrent lord? Are fweet philosophy's enjoyments run Quite to the lees? And has religion none? Brutes capable, would tell you 'tis a lie, And judge you from the kennel and the ftye. Delights like these, ye sensual and profane, Ye are bid, begg'd, befought to entertain; Call'd to these crystal streams, do ye turn off, Obscene, to swill and swallow at a trough? Envy the beaft, then, on whom heav'n bestows Your pleasures, with no curses in the close. Pleasure, admitted in undue degree, Enflaves the will, nor leaves the judgment free.

'Tis not alone the grape's enticing juice

Unnerves the moral pow'rs, and mars their use;

Ambition, av'rice, and the lust of same,

And woman, lovely woman, does the same.

The heart, surrender'd to the ruling pow'r

Of some ungovern'd passion ev'ry hour,

Finds, by degrees, the truths that once bore sway,

And all their deep impressions, wear away.

So coin grows smooth, in traffic current pass'd,

Till Cæsar's image is effac'd at last.

The breach, though small at first, soon op'ning wide,
In rushes folly with a full-moon tide.
Then welcome errors, of whatever size,
To justify it by a thousand lies.
As creeping ivy clings to wood or stone,
And hides the ruin that it seeds upon;
So sophistry cleaves close to, and protects,
Sin's rotten trunk, concealing its defects.
Mortals, whose pleasures are their only care,

First wish to be impos'd on, and then are,

And, left the fulfome artifice should fail,
Themselves will hide its coarseness with a veil.
Not more industrious are the just and true
To give to virtue what is virtue's due—
The praise of wisdom, comeliness, and worth;
And call her charms to public notice forth—
Than vice's mean and disingenuous race
To hide the shocking seatures of her face.
Her form with dress and lotion they repair;
Then kiss their idol, and pronounce her fair.

The facred implement I now employ
Might prove a mischief, or at best a toy;
A trisse, if it move but to amuse:
But, if to wrong the judgment and abuse,
Worse than a poignard in the basest hand,
It stabs at once the morals of a land.

Ye writers of what none with fafety reads,
Footing it in the dance that fancy leads:
Ye novelifts, who mar what ye would mend,
Sniv'ling and driv'ling folly without end;

Whose corresponding misses fill the ream With fentimental frippery and dream, Caught in a delicate foft filken net By some lewd earl, or rake-hell baronet: Ye pimps, who, under virtue's fair pretence, Steal to the closet of young innocence, And teach her, unexperienc'd yet and green, To scribble as you scribbled at fifteen; Who, kindling a combustion of defire, With fome cold moral think to quench the fire; Though all your engineering proves in vain, The dribbling stream ne'er puts it out again: Oh that a verse had pow'r, and could command Far, far away, these slesh-slies of the land: Who fasten without mercy on the fair, And fuck, and leave a craving maggot there. Howe'er disguis'd th' inflammatory tale, And covered with a fine-spun specious veil; Such writers, and fuch readers, owe the guft And relish of their pleasure all to lust.

But the muse, eagle-pinion'd, has in view
A quarry more important still than you;
Down, down the wind she swims, and sails away;
Now stoops upon it, and now grasps the prey.

Petronius! all the muses weep for thee; But ev'ry tear shall scald thy memory: The graces, too, while virtue at their shrine Lay bleeding under that foft hand of thine, Felt each a mortal stab in her own breast, Abhorr'd the facrifice, and curs'd the prieft. Thou polish'd and high-finish'd foe to truth, Gray-beard corrupter of our lift'ning youth, To purge and skim away the filth of vice, That, fo refin'd, it might the more entice, Then pour it on the morals of thy fon, To taint bis heart, was worthy of thine own! Now, while the poison all high life pervades, Write, if thou can'ft, one letter from the shades; One, and one only, charg'd with deep regret That thy worst part, thy principles, live yet;

One fad epiftle thence may cure mankind Of the plague spread by bundles left behind.

'Tis granted, and no plainer truth appears, Our most important are our earliest years; The mind, impressible and soft, with ease Imbibes and copies what she hears and sees, And through life's labyrinth holds fast the clue That education gives her, false or true. Plants rais'd with tenderness are seldom strong; Man's coltish disposition asks the thong; And, without discipline, the fav'rite child, Like a neglected forester, runs wild. But we, as if good qualities would grow Spontaneous, take but little pains to fow; We give some Latin, and a smatch of Greek; Teach him to fence and figure twice a week; And, having done, we think, the best we can, Praise his proficiency, and dub him man.

From school to Cam or Isis, and thence home; And thence, with all convenient speed, to Rome, With rev'rend tutor, clad in habit lay,

To tease for cash, and quarrel with, all day;

With memorandum-book for ev'ry town,

And ev'ry post, and where the chaise broke down;

His stock, a sew French phrases got by heart;

With much to learn, but nothing to impart,

The youth, obedient to his sire's commands,

Sets off a wand'rer into foreign lands.

Surpris'd at all they meet, the gossing pair,

With awkward gait, stretch'd neck, and silly stare,

Discover huge cathedrals, built with stone,

And steeples tow'ring high, much like our own;

But show peculiar light by many a grin

At popish practices observ'd within.

Ere long, some bowing, smirking, smart abbé, Remarks two loit'rers that have lost their way; And, being always prim'd with politesse.

For men of their appearance and address, With much compassion undertakes the task.

To tell them—more than they have wit to ask:

Points to inscriptions wheresoe'er they tread,
Such as, when legible, were never read,
But, being canker'd now and half worn out,
Craze antiquarian brains with endless doubt;
Some headless hero, or some Cæsar shows—
Desective only in his Roman nose;
Exhibits elevations, drawings, plans,
Models of Herculanean pots and pans;
And sells them medals, which, if neither rare
Nor ancient, will be so, preserv'd with care.

Strange the recital! from whatever cause

His great improvement and new lights he draws,

The squire, once bashful, is shame-sac'd no more,

But teems with pow'rs he never selt before;

Whether increas'd momentum, and the force

With which from clime to clime he sped his course,

(As axles sometimes kindle as they go)

Chas'd him, and brought dull nature to a glow;

Or whether clearer skies and softer air,

That make Italian flow'rs so sweet and fair,

Fresh'ning his lazy spirits as he ran,
Unfolded genially, and spread the man;
Returning, he proclaims, by many a grace,
By shrugs, and strange contortions of his face,
How much a dunce, that has been sent to roam,
Excels a dunce that has been kept at home.

Accomplishments have taken virtue's place,
And wisdom falls before exterior grace;
We slight the precious kernel of the stone,
And toil to polish its rough coat alone.
A just deportment, manners grac'd with ease,
Elegant phrase, and sigure form'd to please,
Are qualities that seem to comprehend
Whatever parents, guardians, schools, intend;
Hence an unsurnish'd and a listless mind,
Though busy, trisling; empty, though refin'd;
Hence all that interferes, and dares to clash
With indolence and luxury, is trash;
While learning, once the man's exclusive pride,
Seems verging fast towards the semale side.

Learning itself, receiv'd into a mind

By nature weak, or viciously inclin'd,

Serves but to lead philosophers aftray,

Where children would with ease discern the way.

And, of all arts sagacious dupes invent,

To cheat themselves and gain the world's assent,

The worst is—scripture warp'd from its intent.

The carriage bowls along, and all are pleas'd, If Tom be fober, and the wheels well greas'd; But, if the rogue have gone a cup too far, Left out his linch-pin, or forgot his tar, It suffers interruption and delay, And meets with hindrance in the smoothest way. When some hypothesis absurd and vain Has sill'd with all its sumes a critic's brain, The text that sorts not with his darling whim, Though plain to others, is obscure to him. The will made subject to a lawless force, All is irregular, and out of course; And judgment drunk, and brib'd to lose his way, Winks hard, and talks of darkness at nooneday.

A critic on the facred book should be
Candid and learn'd, dispassionate and free;
Free from the wayward bias bigots feel,
From fancy's influence, and intemp'rate zeal:
But, above all, (or let the wretch refrain,
Nor touch the page he cannot but profane)
Free from the domineering pow'r of lust;
A lewd interpreter is never just.

How shall I speak thee, or thy pow'r address,

Thou god of our idolatry, the press?

By thee, religion, liberty, and laws,

Exert their influence, and advance their cause;

By thee, worse plagues than Pharaoh's land befel,

Disfius'd, make earth the vestibule of hell;

Thou fountain, at which drink the good and wise;

Thou ever-bubbling spring of endless lies;

Like Eden's dread probationary tree,

Knowledge of good and evil is from thee.

No wild enthusiast ever yet could rest Till half mankind were like himself posses'd.

F

Philosophers, who darken and put out Eternal truth by everlafting doubt; Church quacks, with passions under no command, Who fill the world with doctrines contraband, Discov'rers of they know not what, confin'd Within no bounds-the blind that lead the blind; To streams of popular opinion drawn, Deposit in those shallows all their spawn. The wriggling fry foon fill the creeks around, Pois'ning the waters where their swarms abound. Scorn'd by the nobler tenants of the flood, Minnows and gudgeons gorge th' unwholesome food. The propagated myriads spread so fast, E'en Leuwenhoeck himself would stand aghast, Employ'd to calculate th' enormous fum, And own his crab-computing pow'rs o'ercome. Is this hyperbole? The world well known, Your fober thoughts will hardly find it one. Fresh confidence the speculatist takes From ev'ry hair-brain'd proselyte he makes; VOL. I.

And therefore prints: himfelf but half deceiv'd, 'Till others have the foothing tale believ'd. Hence comment after comment, fpun as fine As bloated spiders draw the slimsy line: Hence the same word, that bids our lusts obey, Is misapplied to fanctify their sway. If stubborn Greek refuse to be his friend, Hebrew or Syriac shall be forc'd to bend: If languages and copies all cry, No-Somebody prov'd it centuries ago. Like trout purfued, the critic, in despair, Darts to the mud, and finds his fafety there. Women, whom custom has forbid to fly The scholar's pitch, (the scholar best knows why) With all the simple and unletter'd poor, Admire his learning, and almost adore. Whoever errs, the priest can ne'er be wrong, With fuch fine words familiar to his tongue. Ye ladies! (for, indiff rent in your cause,

I should deferve to forfeit all applause)

Whatever shocks, or gives the least offence.

To virtue, delicacy, truth, or sense,

(Try the criterion, 'tis a faithful guide)

Nor has, nor can have, scripture on its side.

None but an author knows an author's cares, Or fancy's fondness for the child she bears. Committed once into the public arms, The baby feems to fmile with added charms. Like fomething precious ventured far from shore, 'Tis valued for the danger's fake the more. He views it with complacency fupreme, Solicits kind attention to his dream; And daily, more enamour'd of the cheat, Kneels, and asks heav'n to bless the dear deceit. So one, whose story serves at least to show Men lov'd their own productions long ago, Woo'd an unfeeling statue for his wife, Nor rested till the gods had given it life. If some mere driv'ler suck the sugar'd fib, One that still needs his leading-string and bib,

And praise his genius, he is soon repaid

In praise applied to the same part—his head.

For 'tis a rule, that holds for ever true,

Grant me discernment, and I grant it you.

Patient of contradiction, as a child Affable, humble, diffident, and mild; Such was fir Isaac, and such Boyle and Lockee Your blund'rer is as sturdy as a rock. The creature is fo fure to kick and bite, A muleteer's the man to fet him right. First appetite enlists him truth's sworn foe, Then obstinate self-will confirms him so. Tell him he wanders; that his error leads To fatal ills; that, though the path he treads Be flow'ry, and he fee no cause of fear, Death and the pains of hell attend him there; In vain; the flave of arrogance and pride, He has no hearing on the prudent fide. His still refuted quirks he still repeats; New rais'd' objections with new quibbles meets;

'Till, finking in the quickfand he defends,

He dies disputing, and the contest ends—

But not the mischiefs; they, still lest behind,

Like thistle-seeds, are sown by ev'ry wind.

Thus men go wrong with an ingenious skill;
Bend the straight rule to their own crooked will;
And, with a clear and shining lamp supplied,
First put it out, then take it for a guide.
Halting on crutches of unequal size;
One leg by truth supported, one by lies;
They sidle to the goal with awkward pace,
Secure of nothing—but to lose the race.

Faults in the life breed errors in the brain;
And these, reciprocally, those again.
The mind and conduct mutually imprint
And stamp their image in each other's mint:
Each, sire and dam of an infernal race,
Begetting and conceiving all that's base.

None fends his arrow to the mark in view, Whose hand is feeble, or his aim untrue, For though, ere yet the shaft is on the wing,

Or when it first forsakes th' elastic string,

It err but little from th' intended line,

It falls at last far wide of his design:

So he, who seeks a mansion in the sky,

Must watch his purpose with a stedsast eye;

That prize belongs to none but the sincere,

The least obliquity is fatal here.

With caution taste the sweet Circean cup:
He that sips often, at last drinks it up.
Habits are soon assum'd; but, when we strive
To strip them off, 'tis being slay'd alive.
Call'd to the temple of impure delight,
He that abstains, and he alone, does right.
If a wish wander that way, call it home;
He cannot long be safe whose wishes roam.
But, if you pass the threshold, you are caught;
Die then, if pow'r Almighty save you not.
There, hard'ning by degrees, till double steel'd,
Take leave of nature's God, and God reveal'd;

I

E

Then laugh at all you trembled at before;

And, joining the free-thinkers brutal roar,

Swallow the two grand nostrums they dispense—

That scripture lies, and blasphemy is sense.

If clemency revolted by abuse

Be damnable, then damn'd without excuse.

Some dream that they can filence when they will!

The florm of passion, and say, Peace, be still;

But "Thus far and no farther," when address'd

To the wild wave, or wilder human breast,

Implies authority that never can,

That never ought to be the lot of man.

But, muse, forbear; long slights forebode a fall; Strike on the deep-ton'd chord the sum of all.

Hear the just law—the judgment of the skies!

He that hates truth shall be the dupe of lies:

And he that will be cheated to the last,

Delusions, strong as hell, shall bind him fast.

But, if the wand'rer his mistake discern,

Judge his own ways, and sigh for a return,

Bewilder'd once, must he bewail his loss

For ever and for ever? No—the cross!

There, and there only (though the deist rave,
And atheist, if earth bear so base a slave);

There, and there only, is the pow'r to save.

There no delusive hope invites despair;

No mock'ry meets you, no deception, there.

The spells and charms, that blinded you before,
All vanish there, and sascinate no more.

I am no preacher, let this hint suffice—
The cross, once seen, is death to ev'ry vice:
Else he that hung there suffer'd all his pain,
Bled, groan'd, and agoniz'd, and died, in vain.

TRUTH.

description of the second

The man man and heart from the Pensantur trutina. Hon. Lib. II. Epist. 1.

Man, on the dubious waves of error tofs'd,
His ship half founder'd, and his compass lost,
Sees, far as human optics may command,
A sleeping fog, and fancies it dry land:
Spreads all his canvass, ev'ry sinew plies;
Pants for't, aims at it, enters it, and dies!
Then farewell all self-satisfying schemes,
His well-built systems, philosophic dreams;

Deceitful views of future blifs, farewell!

He reads his fentence at the flames of hell.

Hard lot of man—to toil for the reward

Of virtue, and yet lose it! Wherefore hard?—

He that would win the race must guide his horse

Obedient to the customs of the course;

Else, though unequall'd to the goal he slies,

A meaner than himself shall gain the prize.

Grace leads the right way: if you choose the wrong,

Take it, and perish; but restrain your tongue.

Charge not, with light sufficient, and lest free,

Your wilful suicide on God's decree.

Oh how unlike the complex works of man,
Heav'n's easy, artless, unincumber'd, plan!
No meretricious graces to beguile,
No clust'ring ornaments to clog the pile;
From oftentation, as from weakness, free,
It stands like the cerulean arch we see,
Majestic in its own simplicity.
Inscrib'd above the portal, from asar
Conspicuous as the brightness of a star,

Legible only by the light they give,

Stand the foul-quick'ning words—BELIEVE, AND LIVE!

Too many, shock'd at what should charm them most,

Despise the plain direction, and are lost.

Heav'n on such terms! (they cry, with proud disdain)

Incredible, impossible, and vain!—

Rebel, because 'tis easy to obey;

And scorn, for its own sake, the gracious way.

These are the sober, in whose cooler brains

Some thought of immortality remains;

The rest, too busy, or too gay, to wait

On the sad theme, their everlasting state,

Sport for a day, and perish in a night;

The foam upon the waters not so light.

Who judg'd the pharisee? What odious cause

Expos'd him to the vengeance of the laws?

Had he seduc'd a virgin, wrong'd a friend,

Or stabb'd a man to serve some private end?

Was blasphemy his sin? Or did he stray

From the strict duties of the sacred day?

And the thole supply of the state of the

Sit long and late at the carousing board?

(Such were the sins with which he charg'd his Lord.)

No—the man's morals were exact. What then?

'Twas his ambition to be seen of men;

His virtues were his pride; and that one vice

Made all his virtues gewgaws of no price;

He wore them, as sine trappings, for a show;

A praying, synagogue-frequenting, beau.

The felf-applauding bird, the peacock, fee—
Mark what a fumptuous pharifee is he!
Meridian fun-beams tempt him to unfold
His radiant glories; azure, green, and gold:
He treads as if, fome folemn music near,
His measur'd step were govern'd by his ear;
And seems to say—Ye meaner fowl, give place;
I am all splendour, dignity, and grace!

Not so the pheasant on his charms presumes;
Though he, too, has a glory in his plumes.
He, christian like, retreats with modest mien
To the close copse, or far-sequester'd green,
And shines, without desiring to be seen.

The plea of works, as arrogant and vain,

Heav'n turns from with abhorrence and distain:

Not more affronted by avow'd neglect,

Than by the mere diffembler's seign'd respect.

What is all righteousness that men devise?

What—but a fordid bargain for the skies?

But Christ as soon would abdieate his own,

As stoop from heav'n to sell the proud a throne.

His dwelling a recess in some rude rock;
Book, beads, and maple-dish, his meagre stock;
In shirt of hair and weeds of canvass dress'd,
Girt with a bell-rope that the pope has bless'd;
Adust with stripes, told out for ev'ry crime,
And sore tormented, long before his time;
His pray'r preferr'd to saints that cannot aid;
His praise postpon'd, and never to be paid;
See the sage hermit, by mankind admir'd,
With all that bigotry adopts inspir'd,
Wearing out life in his religious whim,
'Till his religious whimsy wears out him.

His works, his abstinence, his zeal, allow'd,
You think him humble—God accounts him proud.
High in demand, though lowly in pretence,
Of all his conduct this the genuine sense—
My penitential stripes, my streaming blood,
Have purchas'd heav'n, and prove my title good.

Turn eastward now, and fancy shall apply
To your weak sight her telescopic eye.
The bramin kindles on his own bare head
The sacred fire—self-torturing his trade!
His voluntary pains, severe and long,
Would give a barb'rous air to British song;
No grand inquisitor could worse invent,
Than he contrives, to suffer, well content.

Which is the faintlier worthy of the two?

Past all dispute, you anchorite say you.

Your sentence and mine differ. What's a name?

I say the bramin has the fairer claim.

If suff'rings, scripture no where recommends,

Devis'd by self, to answer selfish ends,

Give faintship, then all Europe must agree

Ten starvling hermits suffer less than he.

The truth is (if the truth may fuit your ear,
And prejudice have left a paffage clear)
Pride has attain'd its most luxuriant growth,
And poison'd ev'ry virtue in them both.
Pride may be pamper'd while the sless grows lean;
Humility may clothe an English dean;
That grace was Cowper's—his, confess'd by all—
Though plac'd in golden Durham's second stall.
Not all the plenty of a bishop's board,
His palace, and his lacqueys, and "My Lord,"
More nourish pride, that condescending vice,
Than abstinence, and beggary, and lice;
It thrives in mis'ry, and abundant grows;
In mis'ry sools upon themselves impose.

But why before us protestants produce

An Indian mystic, or a French recluse?

Their sin is plain; but what have we to fear,

Resorm'd, and well instructed? You shall hear.

You ancient prude, whose wither'd features show She might be young some forty years ago, Her elbows pinion'd close upon her hips, Her head erect, her fan upon her lips, Her eye-brows arch'd, her eyes both gone aftray To watch you am'rous couple in their play, With bony and unkerchief'd neck, defies The rude inclemency of wintry skies, And fails, with lappet-head and mincing airs, Duly, at clink of bell, to morning pray'rs, To thrift and parfimony much inclin'd, She yet allows herfelf that boy behind. The shiv'ring urchin, bending as he goes, With flip-shod heels, and dew-drop at his nose; His predecessor's coat advanc'd to wear, Which future pages yet are doom'd to share; Carries her bible, tuck'd beneath his arm, And hides his hands, to keep his fingers warm. She, half an angel in her own account, Doubts not hereafter with the faints to mount,

Though not a grace appears, on strictest fearch, But that she fasts, and, item, goes to church. Conscious of age, she recollects her youth, And tells, not always with an eye to truth, Who spann'd her waist, and who, where'er he came, Scrawl'd upon glass mis Bridget's lovely name; Who stole her slipper, fill'd it with tokay, And drank the little bumper ev'ry day. Of temper as envenom'd as an asp; Censorious, and her every word a wasp; In faithful mem'ry fhe records the crimes, Or real, or fictitious, of the times; Laughs at the reputations she has torn, And holds them, dangling at arms length, in fcorn Such are the fruits of fanctimonious pride, Of malice fed while flesh is mortified: Take, Madam, the reward of all your pray'rs, Where hermits and where bramins meet with theirs; Your portion is with them.—Nay, never frown; But, if you pleafe, fome fathoms lower down.

VOL. I.

Artist, attend! your brushes and your paint—
Produce them—take a chair—now draw a saint.

Oh, sorrowful and sad! the streaming tears
Channel her cheeks—a Niobe appears!

Is this a saint? Throw tints and all away—
True piety is cheerful as the day;

Will weep, indeed, and heave a pitying groan,
For others' woes, but smiles upon her own.

What purpose has the King of saints in view?

Why falls the gospel like a gracious dew?

To call up plenty from the teeming earth,

Or curse the desert with a tensold dearth?

Is it that Adam's offspring may be sav'd

From servile sear, or be the more enslav'd?

To loose the links that gall'd mankind before,

Or bind them safter on, and add still more?

The freeborn Christian has no chains to prove;

Or, if a chain, the golden one of love:

No fear attends to quench his glowing sires,

What fear he seels his gratitude inspires.

Shall he for fuch deliv'rance, freely wrought,

Recompense ill? He trembles at the thought.

His master's int'rest and his own, combin'd,

Prompt ev'ry movement of his heart and mind:

Thought, word, and deed, his liberty evince;

His freedom is the freedom of a prince.

Man's obligations infinite, of course

His life should prove that he perceives their force;

His utmost he can render is but small—

The principle and motive all in all.

You have two servants—Tom, an arch, sly rogue,

From top to toe the geta now in vogue,

Genteel in figure, easy in address,

Moves without noise, and swift as an express,

Reports a message with a pleasing grace,

Expert in all the duties of his place:

Say, on what hinge does his obedience move?

Has he a world of gratitude and love?

No, not a spark—'tis all mere sharper's play;

He likes your house, your housemaid, and your pay;

Reduce his wages, or get rid of her,

Tom quits you, with—Your most obedient, Sir.

The dinner serv'd, Charles takes his usual stand,
Watches your eye, anticipates command;
Sighs, if perhaps your appetite should fail;
And, if he but suspects a frown, turns pale;
Consults all day your int'rest and your ease,
Richly rewarded if he can but please;
And, proud to make his firm attachment known,
To save your life would nobly risk his own.

Now which stands highest in your serious thought?

Charles, without doubt, fay you—and so he ought;
One act, that from a thankful heart proceeds,
Excels ten thousand mercenary deeds.

Thus heav'n approves, as hone? and fincere,
The work of gen'rous love and filial fear;
But, with averted eyes, th' omniscient Judge
Scorns the base hireling, and the slavish drudge.

Where dwell these matchless faints?—old Curio

Ev'n at your fide, Sir, and before your eyes,
The favour'd few—th' enthusiasts you despise.
And, pleas'd at heart, because on holy ground
Sometimes a canting hypocrite is found,
Reproach a people with his single fall,
And cast his filthy raiment at them all.
Attend!—an apt similitude shall show
Whence springs the conduct that offends you so.

See where it smokes along the sounding plain,
Blown all assant, a driving, dashing rain,
Peal upon peal redoubling all around,
Shakes it again, and faster, to the ground;
Now slashing wide, now glancing as in play,
Swift beyond thought the lightnings dart away.
Ere yet it came the trav'ler urg'd his steed,
And hurried, but with unsuccessful speed;
Now, drench'd throughout, and hopeless of his case,
He drops the rein, and leaves him to his pace.

Suppose, unlook'd for in a scene so rude, Long hid by interposing hill or wood, Some mansion, neat and elegantly dress'd, By some kind hospitable heart posses'd, Offer him warmth, fecurity, and rest; Think with what pleasure, safe, and at his ease, He hears the tempest howling in the trees; What glowing thanks his lips and heart employ, While danger past is turn'd to present joy. So fares it with the finner, when he feels A growing dread of vengeance at his heels: His conscience, like a glassy lake before, Lash'd into foaming waves, begins to roar; The law, grown clamorous, though filent long, Arraigns him-charges him with ev'ry wrong-Afferts the rights of his offended Lord; And death, or restitution, is the word: The last impossible, he fears the first, And, having well deferv'd, expects the worst. Then welcome refuge, and a peaceful home; Oh for a shelter from the wrath to come!

Crush me, ye rocks; ye falling mountains, hide Or bury me in ocean's angry tide. The fcrutiny of those all-seeing eyes I dare not -And you need not, God replies; The remedy you want I freely give: The book shall teach you-read, believe, and live! 'Tis done—the raging from is heard no more, Mercy receives him on her peaceful shore; And Justice, guardian of the dread command, Drops the red vengeance from his willing hand. A foul redeem'd demands a life of praise; Hence the complexion of his future days. Hence a demeanour holy and unspeck'd, And the world's hatred, as its fure effect. Some lead a life unblameable and just, Their own dear virtue their unstiaken truft : " best) They never fin-or, if (as all offend) Some trivial flips their daily walk attend, The poor are near at hand, the charge is small, A flight gratuity atones for all!

For, though the pope has lost his int'rest here,

And pardons are not sold as once they were,

No papist more desirous to compound,

Than some grave sinners upon English ground.

That plea resuted, other quirks they seek—

Mercy is infinite, and man is weak;

The suture shall obliterate the past,

And heav'n, no doubt, shall be their home at last.

Come, then—a still, small whisper in your ear—
He has no hope who never had a fear;
And he that never doubted of his state,
He may, perhaps—perhaps he may—too late.

The path to bliss abounds with many a snare;

Learning is one, and wit, however rare.

The Frenchman, first in literary fame,

(Mention him, if you please. Voltaire?—The same.)

With spirit, genius, eloquence, supplied,

Liv'd long, wrote much, laugh'd heartily, and died.

The scripture was his jest-book, whence he drew

Bon mots to gall the Christian and the Jew.

An infidel in health, but what when fick?

Oh—then a text would touch him at the quick.

View him at Paris, in his last career:

Surrounding throngs the demi-god revere;

Exalted on his pedestal of pride,

And sum'd with frankincense on ev'ry side,

He begs their flatt'ry with his latest breath;

And, smother'd in't at last, is prais'd to death!

Yon cottager, who weaves at her own door,
Pillow and bobbins all her little store;
Content, though mean; and cheerful, if not gay;
Shuffling her threads about the live-long day,
Just earns a scanty pittance; and at night
Lies down secure, her heart and pocket light;
She, for her humble sphere by nature sit,
Has little understanding, and no wit,
Receives no praise; but, though her lot be such,
(Toilsome and indigent) she renders much;
Just knows, and knows no more, her Bible true.

A truth the brilliant Frenchman never knew;

And in that charter reads, with sparkling eyes,

Her title to a treasure in the skies.

Oh, happy peafant! Oh, unhappy bard! His the mere tinsel, her's the rich reward; He prais'd, perhaps, for ages yet to come; She never heard of half a mile from home: He, lost in errors, his vain heart prefers; She, safe in the simplicity of her's.

Not many wife, rich, noble, or profound
In science, win one inch of heav'nly ground.
And is it not a mortifying thought
The poor should gain it, and the rich should not?
No—the volupt'aries, who ne'er forget
One pleasure lost, lose heaven without regret;
Regret would rouse them, and give birth to pray'r;
Pray'r would add saith, and saith would fix them there.

I

B

A

A

T

N

A

E

T

To

Se

Not that the Former of us all in this,

Or aught he does, is govern'd by caprice;

The supposition is replete with sin,

And bears the brand of blasphemy burnt in.

Not fo-the filver trumpet's heav'nly call Sounds for the poor, but founds alike for all: Kings are invited; and, would kings obey, No flaves on earth more welcome were than they: But royalty, nobility, and state, Are fuch a dead preponderating weight, That endless bliss, (how strange soe'er it seem) In counterpoife, flies up and kicks the beam. 'Tis open, and ye cannot enter-why? Because ye will not, Convers would reply— And he fays much that many may dispute And cavil at with ease, but none refute. Oh, bless'd effect of penury and want, The feed fown there, how vig'rous is the plant! No foil like poverty for growth divine, As leanest land supplies the richest wine. Earth gives too little, giving only bread, To nourish pride, or turn the weakest head: To them the founding jargon of the schools Seems what it is—a cap and bells for fools:

The light they walk by, kindled from above,
Shows them the shortest way to life and love:
They, strangers to the controversial field,
Where deists, always foil'd, yet scorn to yield,
And never check'd by what impedes the wise,
Believe, rush forward, and possess the prize.

Envy, ye great, the dull unletter'd small:

Ye have much cause for envy—but not all.

We boast some rich ones whom the gospel sways;

And one who wears a coronet, and prays;

Like gleanings of an olive-tree, they show

Here and there one upon the topmost bough.

1

I

F

7

B

F

A

F

S

How readily, upon the gospel plan,

That question has its answer—What is man?

Sinful and weak, in ev'ry sense a wretch;

An instrument, whose chords, upon the stretch,

And strain'd to the last screw that he can bear,

Yield only discord in his Maker's ear:

Once the blest residence of truth divine,

Glorious as Solyma's interior shrine,

Where, in his own oracular abode, and a medianted Dwelt visibly the light-creating God; in the trade to the A. But made long fince, like Babylon of old, A den of mischiefs never to be told: And she, once mistress of the realms around, Now scatter'd wide, and no where to be found, As foon shall rife and re-ascend the throne, By native pow'r and energy her own, now has analyst As nature, at her own peculiar cost, and another all Restore to man the glories he has lost. Go-bid the winter cease to chill the year; Replace the wand'ring comet in his fphere; Then boast (but wait for that unhop'd for hour) The felf-restoring arm of human pow'r. But what is man in his own proud efteem? Hear him—himself the poet and the theme: A monarch, cloth'd with majesty and awe; His mind his kingdom, and his will his law; Grace in his mien, and glory in his eyes, Supreme on earth, and worthy of the skies,

Strength in his heart, dominion in his nod,
And, thunderbolts excepted, quite a God!

So fings he, charm'd with his own mind and form, The fong magnificent—the theme a worm! Himself so much the source of his delight, His Maker has no beauty in his fight. See where he fits, contemplative and fix'd, Pleasure and wonder in his features mix'd; His passions tam'd, and all at his controul, How perfect the composure of his foul! Complacency has breath'd a gentle gale O'er all his thoughts, and fwell'd his eafy fail: His books well trimm'd, and in the gayest style, Like regimented coxcombs, rank and file, Adorn his intellects as well as shelves, And teach him notions splendid as themselves: The Bible only stands neglected there-Though that of all most worthy of his care; And, like an infant, troublefome awake, Is left to fleep, for peace and quiet fake.

1

V

T

So

A

Bu

Gr

TH

Fli

Th

What shall the man deserve of human kind, Whose happy skill and industry, combin'd, Shall prove (what argument could never yet) The Bible an imposture and a cheat? The praises of the libertine, profes'd The worst of men, and curses of the best. Where should the living, weeping o'er his woes: The dying, trembling at the awful close; Where the betray'd, forfaken, and oppress'd, The thousands whom the world forbids to rest; Where should they find, (those comforts at an end The scripture yields) or hope to find, a friend? Sorrow might muse herself to madness then; And, feeking exile from the fight of men, Bury herfelf in folitude profound, Grow frantic with her pangs, and bite the ground. Thus often unbelief, grown fick of life, Flies to the tempting pool, or felon knife. The jury meet, the coroner is short, And lunacy the verdict of the court.

Reverse the sentence, let the truth be known,
Such lunacy is ignorance alone.

They knew not, what fome bishops may not know,
That scripture is the only cure of woe.
That field of promise, how it slings abroad

Its odour o'er the Christian's thorny road!

The foul reposing on afford relief

The foul, reposing on affur'd relief,

Feels herself happy amidst all her grief,

Forgets her labour as fhe toils along,

Weeps tears of joy, and bursts into a song.

But the same word, that, like the polish'd share,

Ploughs up the roots of a believer's care,

Kills, too, the flow'ry weeds, where'er they grow,

1

That bind the finner's Bacchanalian brow.

Oh, that unwelcome voice of heav'nly love,

Sad messenger of mercy from above!

How does it grate upon his thankless ear,

Crippling his pleasures with the cramp of fear!

His will and judgment at continual strife,

That civil war imbitters all his life:

In vain he points his pow'rs against the skies,

In vain he closes or averts his eyes,

Truth will intrude—she bids him yet beware;

And shakes the sceptic in the scorner's chair.

Though various foes against the truth combine,

Pride above all opposes her design;

Pride, of a growth superior to the rest,

The subtlest serpent, with the lostiest crest,

Swells at the thought, and, kindling into rage,

Would his the cherub mercy from the stage.

And is the foul, indeed, so lost?—she cries;

Fall'n from her glory, and too weak to rise?

Torpid and dull, beneath a frozen zone,

Has she no spark that may be doom'd her own?

Grant her indebted to what zealots call

Grace undeserv'd—yet, surely, not for all!

Some beams of rectitude she yet displays,

Some love of virtue, and some pow'r to praise;

Can list herself above corporeal things,

And, searing on her own unborrow'd wings,

Possess herself of all that's good or true,

Affert the skies, and vindicate her due.

Past indiscretion is a venial crime;

And, if the youth, unmellow'd yet by time,

Bore on his branch, luxuriant then and rude,

Fruits of a blighted size, austere and crude,

Maturer years shall happier stores produce,

And meliorate the well concocted juice.

Then, conscious of her meritorious zeal,

To justice she may make her bold appeal;

And leave to mercy, with a tranquil mind,

The worthless and unsruitful of mankind.

Hear, then, how mercy, slighted and defied,

Retorts th' affront against the crown of pride.

Perish the virtue, as it ought, abhorr'd,
And the fool with it, who insults his Lord.
Th' atonement a Redeemer's love has wrought
Is not for you—the righteous need it not.
Seest thou you harlot, wooing all she meets,
The worn-out nuisance of the public streets;

Herself, from morn to night, from night to morn,

Her own abhorrence, and as much your scorn!

The gracious show'r, unlimited and free,

Shall fall on her, when heav'n denies it thee.

Of all that wisdom dictates, this the drift—

That man is dead in sin, and life a gift.

Is virtue, then, unless of Christian growth,

Mere fallacy, or foolishness, or both?

Ten thousand sages lost in endless woe,

For ignorance of what they could not know?

That speech betrays at once a bigot's tongue—

Charge not a God with such outrageous wrong!

Truly, not I—the partial light men have,

My creed persuades me, well employed, may save;

While he that scorns the noon-day beam, perverse,

Shall find the blessing, unimprov'd, a curse.

Let heathen worthies, whose exalted mind

Lest sensuality and dross behind,

Posses, for me, their undisputed lot,

And take, unenvied, the reward they sought.

But still, in virtue of a Saviour's plea, Not blind by choice, but destin'd not to see. There fortitude and wisdom were a flame Celestial, though they knew not whence it came, Deriv'd from the same source of light and grace That guides the Christian in his swifter race. Their judge was conscience, and her rule their law: That rule, purfued with rev'rence and with awe, Led them, however falt'ring, faint, and flow, From what they knew to what they wish'd to know. But let not him that shares a brighter day Traduce the splendour of a noon-tide ray, Prefer the twilight of a darker time, And deem his base stupidity no crime; The wretch, who flights the bounty of the skies, And finks, while favour'd with the means to rife, Shall find them rated at their full amount, The good he fcorn'd all carried to account. Marshalling all his terrors as he came; Thunder, and earthquake, and devouring flame;

Erom Sinai's top Jehovah gave the law—
Life for obedience—death for ev'ry flaw.

When the great Sov'reign would his will express,
He gives a perfect rule; what can he less?

And guards it with a fanction as fevere
As vengeance can inflict, or finners fear:

Else his own glorious rights he would disclaim,
And man might safely trifle with his name.

He bids him glow with unremitting love
To all on earth, and to himself above;

Condemns th' injurious deed, the sland'rous tongue,
The thought that meditates a brother's wrong:

Brings not alone the more conspicuous part—

His conduct—to the test, but tries his heart.

Hark! univerfal nature shook and groan'd,
'Twas the last trumpet—see the Judge enthron'd:
Rouse all your courage at your utmost need;
Now summon ev'ry virtue—stand, and plead.
What! silent? Is your boasting heard no more?
That self-renouncing wisdom, learn'd before,

Had shed immortal glories on your brow,

That all your virtues cannot purchase now.

All joy to the believer! He can speak-

Trembling, yet happy; confident, yet meek.

Since the dear hour that brought me to thy foot,

And cut up all my follies by the root,

I never trufted in an arm but thine,

Nor hop'd, but in thy righteousness divine:

My pray'rs and alms, imperfect, and defil'd,

Were but the feeble efforts of a child;

Howe'er perform'd, it was their brightest part

That they proceeded from a grateful heart:

Cleans'd in thine own all-purifying blood,

Forgive their evil, and accept their good.

I cast them at thy feet-my only plea

Is what it was-dependence upon thee:

While struggling in the vale of tears below,

That never fail'd, nor shall it fail me now.

Angelic gratulations rend the skies:

Pride falls unpitied, never more to rise;

Humility is crown'd; and faith receives the prize.

EXPOSTULATION.

Where savies lead as a super ren

Or waster that cold offered to

Tantane, tam patiens, nuello certamine-tolli

Dona fines?

VIRG.

Why weeps the muse for England? What appears
In England's case to move the muse to tears?
From side to side of her delightful isle,
Is she not cloth'd with a perpetual smile?
Can nature add a charm, or art confer
A new-found luxury, not seen in her?

Where under heav'n is pleasure more pursued? Or where does cold reflection less intrude? Her fields a rich expanse of wavy corn, Pour'd out from plenty's overflowing horn; Ambrofial gardens, in which art fupplies The fervour and the force of Indian skies; Her peaceful shores, where busy commerce waits To pour his golden tide through all her gates; Whom fiery funs, that fcorch the ruffet spice Of eastern groves, and oceans floor'd with ice Forbid in vain to push his daring way To darker climes, or climes of brighter day; Whom the winds waft where'er the billows roll, From the world's girdle to the frozen pole; The chariots, bounding in her wheel-worn streets; Her vaults below, where ev'ry vintage meets; Her theatres, her revels, and her fports; The scenes to which not youth alone reforts, But age, in spite of weakness and of pain, Still haunts, in hope to dream of youth again;

All speak her happy: let the muse look round
From East to West, no sorrow can be sound;
Or only what, in cottages confin'd,
Sighs unregarded to the passing wind.
Then wherefore weep for England? What appears
In England's case to move the muse to tears?

The prophet wept for Israel; wish'd his eyes
Were fountains fed with infinite supplies:
For Israel dealt in robbery and wrong;
There were the scorner's and the sland'rer's tongue;
Oaths, us'd as playthings or convenient tools,
As int'rest bias'd knaves, or fashion fools;
Adult'ry, neighing at his neighbour's door;
Oppression, labouring hard to grind the poor;
The partial balance, and deceitful weight;
The treach'rous smile, a mask for secret hate;
Hypocrisy, formality in pray'r,
And the dull service of the lip, were there.
Her women, insolent and self-cares'd,
By vanity's unwearied singer dress'd,

Forgot the blush that virgin sears impart

To modest cheeks, and borrowed one from art;

Were just such trisles, without worth or use,

As silly pride and idleness produce;

Curl'd, scented, surbelow'd and slounc'd around,

With seet too delicate to touch the ground,

They stretch'd the neck, and roll'd the wanton eye,

And sigh'd for ev'ry sool that slutter'd by.

He faw his people flaves to ev'ry lust,

Lewd, avaricious, arrogant, unjust;

He heard the wheels of an avenging God

Groan heavily along the distant road;

Saw Babylon set wide her two-leav'd brass

To let the military deluge pass,

Jerusalem a prey, her glory soil'd,

Her princes captive, and her treasures spoil'd;

Wept till all Israel heard his bitter cry;

Stamp'd with his foot; and smote upon his thigh:

But wept, and stamp'd, and smote his thigh, in vain—

Pleasure is deaf when told of suture pain,

R

T

T

A

T

B

A

A

W

In

And founds prophetic are too rough to fuit

Ears long accustom'd to the pleasing lute—

They scorn'd his inspiration and his theme;

Pronounced him frantic, and his sears a dream;

With self-indusgence wing'd the sleeting hours,

'Till the soe found them, and down fell the tow'rs.

Long time Affyria bound them in her chain;
'Till penitence had purg'd the public stain,
And Cyrus, with relenting pity mov'd,
Return'd them happy to the land they lov'd:
There, proof against prosperity, awhile
They stood the test of her ensnaring smile;
And had the grace, in scenes of peace, to show
The virtue they had learn'd in scenes of woe.
But man is frail, and can but ill sustain
A long immunity from grief and pain;
And, after all the joys that plenty leads,
With tip-toe step vice silently succeeds.

When he that rul'd them with a shepherd's rod, In form a man, in dignity a God, Came, not expected in that humble guise,
To sift and search them with unerring eyes,
He found, conceal'd beneath a fair outside,
The filth of rottenness and worm of pride;
Their piety a system of deceit,
Scripture employ'd to sanctify the cheat;
The pharisee the dupe of his own art,
Self-idoliz'd, and yet a knave at heart!

When nations are to perish in their sins,
'Tis in the church the leprosy begins.

The priest, whose office is, with zeal sincere,
To watch the sountain and preserve it clear,
Carelessly nods and sleeps upon the brink,
While others poison what the slock must drink;
Or, waking at the call of lust alone,
Insufes lies and errors of his own.

His unsuspecting sheep believe it pure;
And, tainted by the very means of cure,
Catch from each other a contagious spot,
The soul forerunner of a gen'ral rot.

F

Then truth is hush'd, that herefy may preach; And all is trash that reason cannot reach: Then God's own image on the foul impress'd Becomes a mock'ry, and a standing jest; And faith, the root whence only can arise The graces of a life that wins the skies, Loses at once all value and esteem, Pronounc'd by gray-beards a pernicious dream: Then ceremony leads her bigots forth, Prepar'd to fight for shadows of no worth; While truths, on which eternal things depend, Find not, or hardly find, a fingle friend: As foldiers watch the fignal of command, They learn to bow, to kneel, to fit, to stand; Happy to fill religion's vacant place With hollow form, and gesture, and grimace. Such, when the teacher of his church was there,

People and priest, the sons of Israel were;

Stiff in the letter, lax in the design

And import, of their oracles divine;

Their learning legendary, falle, abfurd, And yet exalted above God's own word; They drew a curse from an intended good, Puff'd up with gifts they never understood. He judg'd them with as terrible a frown As if not love, but wrath, had brought him down: Yet he was gentle as fost summer airs; Had grace for others' fins, but none for theirs. Through all he spoke a noble plainness ran-Rhet'ric is artifice, the work of man; And tricks and turns, that fancy may devise, Are far too mean for him that rules the fkies. Th' aftonish'd vulgar trembled while he tore The malk from faces never feen before: He stripp'd th' impostors in the noon-day fun; Show'd that they follow'd all they feem'd to fhun; Their pray'rs made public, their excesses kept As private as the chambers where they flept; The temple and its holy rites profan'd By mumm'ries he that dwelt in it disdain'd;

Uplifted hands, that at convenient times

Could act extortion and the worst of crimes,

Wash'd with a neatness scrupulously nice,

And free from ev'ry taint but that of vice.

Judgment, however tardy, mends her pace

When obstinacy once has conquer'd grace.

They saw distemper heal'd, and life restor'd,

In answer to the fiat of his word;

Consess'd the wonder, and, with daring tongue,

Blasphem'd th' authority from which it sprung.

They knew, by sure prognostics seen on high,

The future tone and temper of the sky;

But, grave dissemblers! could not understand

That sin let loose speaks punishment at hand.

Ask now of history's authentic page,

And call up evidence from ev'ry age;

Display with busy and laborious hand

The bleffings of the most indebted land;

What nation will you find, whose annals prove

So rich an int'rest in almighty love?

Where dwell they now, where dwelt in ancient day, A people planted, water'd, bleft, as they? Let Egypt's plagues and Canaan's woes proclaim The favours pour'd upon the Jewish name-Their freedom, purchas'd for them at the cost Of all their hard oppreffors valued most; Their title to a country not their own Made fure by prodigies 'till then unknown; For them, the states they left made waste and void; For them, the states to which they went destroy'd; A cloud to measure out their march by day, By night a fire to cheer the gloomy way; That moving fignal fummoning, when beft, Their hoft to move; and, when it stay'd, to rest. For them the rocks diffolv'd into a flood, The dews condens'd into angelic food; Their very garments facred-old, yet new, And Time forbid to touch them as he flew; Streams, swell'd above the bank, enjoin'd to stand, While they pass'd through to their appointed land;

]

V

R

A

Ti Ai

In

W

Ha

Ву

Their leader arm'd with meekness, zeal, and love,
And grac'd with clear credentials from above;
Themselves secur'd beneath th' Almighty wing;
Their God their captain*, lawgiver, and king;
Crown'd with a thousand vict'ries, and at last
Lords of the conquer'd soil, there rooted fast,
In peace possessing what they won by war,
Their name far publish'd, and rever'd as far;
Where will you find a race like theirs, endow'd
With all that man e'er wish'd, or heav'n bestow'd?

They, and they only, amongst all mankind,
Receiv'd the transcript of th' eternal mind;
Were trusted with his own engraven laws,
And constituted guardians of his cause;
Theirs were the prophets, theirs the priestly call,
And theirs, by birth, the Saviour of us all.
In vain the nations, that had seen them rise
With sierce and envious, yet admiring, eyes,
Had sought to crush them, guarded as they were
By pow'r divine, and skill that could not err.

^{*} Vide Joshua v. 14.

Had they maintain'd allegiance firm and fure, And kept the faith immaculate and pure, Then the proud eagles of all-conqu'ring Rome Had found one city not to be o'ercome; And the twelve standards of the tribes unfurl'd, Had bid defiance to the warring world. But grace abus'd brings forth the foulest deeds, As richest foil the most luxuriant weeds. Cur'd of the golden calves, their fathers' fin, They fet up felf, that idol god within; View'd a Deliv'rer with disdain and hate, Who left them still a tributary state; Seiz'd fast his hand, held out to fet them free From a worse yoke, and nail'd it to the tree: There was the confummation and the crown, The flow'r of Ifrael's infamy full blown; Thence date their fad declenfion, and their fall; Their woes, not yet repeal'd-thence date them all! Thus fell the best instructed in her day, And the most favour'd land, look where we may.

I

T

T

K

If

P

Philosophy, indeed, on Grecian eyes
Had pour'd the day, and clear'd the Roman skies;
In other climes, perhaps, creative art,
With pow'r surpassing their's, perform'd her part;
Might give more life to marble, or might fill
The glowing tablets with a juster skill,
Might shine in fable, and grace idle themes
With all th' embroid'ry of poetic dreams:
'Twas their's alone to dive into the plan
That truth and mercy had reveal'd to man;
And, while the world beside, that plan unknown,
Deisied useless wood or senseless stone,
They breath'd in faith their well-directed pray'rs,
And the true God—the God of truth—was their's.

Their glory faded, and their race dispers'd;
The last of nations now, though once the first;
They warn and teach the proudest, would they learn,
Keep wisdom, or meet vengeance in your turn:
If we escap'd not, if Heav'n spar'd not us,
Peel'd, scatter'd, and exterminated, thus;

I

N

V

F

T

N

C

W

T

A

T

W

As

T

If vice receiv'd her retribution due When we were visited, what hope for you? When God arifes, with an awful frown, To punish lust, or pluck presumption down; When gifts perverted, or not duly priz'd, Pleafure o'ervalued, and his grace despis'd, Provoke the vengeance of his righteous hand To pour down wrath upon a thankless land; He will be found impartially fevere; Too just to wink, or speak the guilty clear. Oh, Ifrael, of all nations most undone! Thy diadem displac'd, thy sceptre gone; Thy temple, once thy glory, fall'n and ras'd, And thou a worshipper e'en where thou may'st; Thy fervices, once holy without fpot, Mere shadows now, their ancient pomp forgot; Thy Levites, once a confecrated hoft, No longer Levites, and their lineage loft, And thou thyself o'er ev'ry country fown,

With none on earth that thou canst call thine own;

Cry aloud, thou that fittest in the dust,
Cry to the proud, the cruel, and unjust;
Knock at the gates of nations, rouse their fears;
Say wrath is coming, and the storm appears;
But raise the shrillest cry in British ears.

What ails thee, restless as the waves that roar, And fling their foam against thy chalky shore? Mistress, at least while Providence shall please, And trident-bearing queen of the wide feas-Why, having kept good faith, and often shown Friendship and truth to others, find'st thou none? Thou that hast set the persecuted free, None interposes now to succour thee. Countries, indebted to thy pow'r, that shine With light derived from thee, would fmother thine: Thy very children watch for thy difgrace-A lawless brood! and curse thee to thy face. Thy rulers load thy credit, year by year, With fums Peruvian mines could never clear; As if, like arches built with skilful hand, The more 'twere prest the firmer it would stand.

The cry in all thy ships is still the same-Speed us away to battle and to fame. Thy mariners explore the wild expanse, Impatient to descry the flags of France: But, though they fight as thine have ever fought, Return, asham'd, without the wreaths they fought. Thy senate is a scene of civil jar, Chaos of contrarieties at war; Where sharp and solid, phlegmatic and light, Discordant atoms meet, ferment, and fight; Where obstinacy takes his sturdy stand, To disconcert what policy has plann'd; Where policy is busied all night long In fetting right what faction has fet wrong; Where flails of oratory thresh the floor, That yields them chaff and dust, and nothing more. Thy rack'd inhabitants repine, complain, Tax'd till the brow of labour fweats in vain; War lays a burthen on the reeling state, And peace does nothing to relieve the weight;

Successive loads fucceeding broils impose,
And fighing millions prophefy the close.

Is adverse providence, when ponder'd well, So dimly writ, or difficult to fpell, Thou canst not read with readiness and ease Providence adverse in events like these? Know, then, that heav'nly wisdom on this ball Creates, gives birth to, guides, confummates, all; That, while laborious and quick-thoughted man Snuffs up the praise of what he seems to plan, He first conceives, then perfects his design, As a mere instrument in hands divine. Blind to the working of that fecret pow'r That balances the wings of ev'ry hour, The bufy trifler dreams himself alone, Frames many a purpose, and God works his own. States thrive or wither, as moons wax and wane, Ev'n as his will and his decrees ordain. While honour, virtue, piety, bear fway, They flourish; and, as these decline, decay.

In just refentment of his injur'd laws, He pours contempt on them, and on their cause: Strikes the rough thread of error right athwart The web of ev'ry scheme they have at heart; Bids rottenness invade and bring to dust The pillars of support, in which they trust, And do his errand of disgrace and shame On the chief strength and glory of the frame. None ever yet impeded what he wrought; None bars him out from his most secret thought: Darkness itself before his eye is light, And hell's close mischief naked in his fight. Stand now, and judge thyfelf.-Haft thou incurr'd His anger, who can waste thee with a word, Who poifes and proportions fea and land, Weighing them in the hollow of his hand, And in whose awful fight all nations seem

As grashoppers, as dust, a drop, a dream?

Claim'd all the glory of thy prosp'rous wars?

Haft thou (a facrilege his foul abhors)

F

F

Proud of thy fleets and armies, stol'n the gem Of his just praise, to lavish it on them? Hast thou not learn'd, what thou art often told, A truth still facred, and believ'd of old, That no fuccess attends on spears and swords Unbleft, and that the battle is the Lord's? That courage is his creature, and difmay The post that at his bidding speeds away, Ghaftly in feature, and his stamm'ring tongue With doleful humour and fad prefage hung, To quell the valour of the stoutest heart, And teach the combatant a woman's part? That he bids thousands fly when none pursue, Saves as he will, by many or by few, And claims for ever, as his royal right, Th' event and fure decision of the fight?

Hast thou, though suckled at fair freedom's breast,
Exported slav'ry to the conquer'd East,
Pull'd down the tyrants India serv'd with dread,
And rais'd thyself, a greater, in their stead?

Gone thither arm'd and hungry, return'd full,

Fed from the richest veins of the Mogul,

A despot big with pow'r obtain'd by wealth,

And that obtain'd by rapine and by stealth?

With Asiatic vices stor'd thy mind,

But lest their virtues and thine own behind;

And, having truck'd thy soul, brought home the see,

To tempt the poor to sell himself to thee?

I

I

I

Hast thou by statute show'd from its design
The Saviour's feast, his own blest bread and wine,
And made the symbols of atoning grace,
An office-key, a pick-lock to a place,
That insidels may prove their title good
By an oath dipp'd in sacramental blood?
A blot that will be still a blot, in spite
Of all that grave apologists may write;
And, though a bishop toil to cleanse the stain,
He wipes and scours the silver cup in vain.
And hast thou sworn, on ev'ry slight pretence,
'Till perjuries are common as bad pence,

While thousands, careless of the damning sin,
Kiss the book's outside who ne'er look within?

Haft thou, when heav'n has cloth'd thee with difgrace, And, long provok'd, repaid thee to thy face, (For thou hast known eclipses, and endur'd Dimness and anguish, all thy beams obscur'd, When fin has shed dishonour on thy brow; And never of a fabler hue than now) Hast thou, with heart perverse and conscience sear'd, Despising all rebuke, still persever'd, And, having chosen evil, fcorn'd the voice That cried, Repent !- and gloried in thy choice? Thy fastings, when calamity at last Suggests th' expedient of a yearly fast, What mean they? Canst thou dream there is a pow'r In lighter diet, at a later hour, To charm to fleep the threat'ning of the skies, And hide past folly from all-seeing eyes? The fast that wins deliv'rance, and suspends The stroke that a vindictive God intends,

Is to renounce hypocrify; to draw

Thy life upon the pattern of the law;

To war with pleasure, idoliz'd before;

To vanquish lust, and wear its yoke no more.

All fasting else, whate'er be the pretence,

Is wooing mercy by renew'd offence.

Haft thou within thee sin, that in old time
Brought fire from heav'n, the sex-abusing crime,
Whose horrid perpetration stamps disgrace
Baboons are free from upon human race?
Think on the fruitful and well-water'd spot
That sed the slocks and herds of wealthy Lot,
Where Paradise seem'd still vouchsas'd on earth,
Burning and scorch'd into perpetual dearth,
Or, in his words who damn'd the base desire,
Suff'ring the vengeance of eternal sire:
Then nature, injur'd, scandaliz'd, defil'd,
Unveil'd her blushing cheek, look'd on, and smil'd;
Beheld with joy the lovely scene desac'd,
And prais'd the wrath that laid her beauties waste.

Far be the thought from any verse of mine,
And farther still the form'd and fix'd design,
To thrust the charge of deeds that I detest
Against an innocent unconscious breast:
The man that dares traduce, because he can
With safety to himself, is not a man:
An individual is a sacred mark,
Not to be pierc'd in play, or in the dark;
But public censure speaks a public soe,
Unless a zeal for virtue guide the blow.

The prieftly brotherhood, devout, fincere,
From mean self-int'rest and ambition clear,
Their hope in Heav'n, servility their scorn,
Prompt to persuade, expostulate, and warn,
Their wisdom pure, and giv'n them from above,
Their usefulness ensur'd by zeal and love,
As meek as the man Moses, and withal
As bold as in Agrippa's presence Paul,
Should sly the world's contaminating touch,
Holy and unpolluted:—are thine such?

Except a few with Eli's spirit blest, Hophni and Phineas may describe the rest.

Where shall a teacher look, in days like these, For ears and hearts that he can hope to please? Look to the poor-the simple and the plain Will hear, perhaps, thy falutary strain: Humility is gentle, apt to learn, Speak but the word, will liften and return. Alas, not so! the poorest of the flock Are proud, and fet their faces as a rock; Denied that earthly opulence they choose, God's better gift they fcoff at, and refuse. The rich, the produce of a nobler stem, Are more intelligent, at least-try them. Oh, vain inquiry! they, without remorfe, Are altogether gone a devious course; Where beck'ning pleasure leads them, wildly stray; Have burft the bands, and cast the yoke away. Now, born upon the wings of truth fublime,

Review thy dim original and prime.

This island, spot of unreclaim'd rude earth, The cradle that receiv'd thee at thy birth, Was rock'd by many a rough Norwegian blaft, And Danish howlings scar'd thee as they pass'd; For thou wast born amid the din of arms, And fuck'd a breast that panted with alarms. While yet thou wast a grov'ling, puling chit, Thy bones not fashion'd, and thy joints not knit, The Roman taught thy stubborn knee to bow, Though twice a Cæsar could not bend thee now: His victory was that of orient light, When the fun's shafts disperse the gloom of night. Thy language at this distant moment shows How much the country to the conqu'ror owes; Expressive, energetic, and refin'd, It sparkles with the gems he left behind: He brought thy land a bleffing when he came; He found thee favage, and he left thee tame; Taught the to clothe thy pink'd and painted hide, And grace thy figure with a foldier's pride;

He fow'd the feeds of order where he went,
Improv'd thee far beyond his own intent,
And, while he rul'd thee by the fword alone,
Made thee at last a warrior like his own.
Religion, if in heav'nly truths attir'd,
Needs only to be seen to be admir'd;
But thine, as dark as witch'ries of the night,
Was form'd to harden hearts and shock the sight.
Thy Druids struck the well-hung harps they bore
With singers deeply dy'd in human gore;
And, while the victim slowly bled to death,'
Upon the rolling chords rung out his dying breath.

Who brought the lamp, that with awaking beams
Dispell'd thy gloom, and broke away thy dreams,
Tradition, now decrepid and worn out,
Babbler of ancient fables, leaves a doubt:
But still light reach'd thee; and those gods of thine,
Woden and Thor, each tott'ring in his shrine,
Fell, broken, and defac'd, at their own door,
As Dagon in Philistia long before.

A

T

T

H

But Rome, with forceries and magic wand, Soon rais'd a cloud that darken'd ev'ry land; And thine was fmother'd in the stench and fog Of Tiber's marshes and the papal bog. Then priefts, with bulls and briefs, and shaven crowns, And griping fifts, and unrelenting frowns, Legates and delegates, with pow'rs from hell, Though heavenly in pretention, fleec'd thee well; And to this hour, to keep it fresh in mind, Some twigs of that old scourge are left behind *. Thy foldiery, the pope's well manag'd pack, Were train'd beneath his lash, and knew the smack, And, when he laid them on the scent of blood, Would hunt a Saracen through fire and flood. Lavish of life, to win an empty tomb, That prov'd a mint of wealth, a mine, to Rome, They left their bones beneath unfriendly skies, His worthless absolution all the prize!

Which may be found at Doctors' Commons.

(

1

1

V

A

B

C

0

T

H

F

G

Bi

Thou wast the veriest slave, in days of yore, That ever dragg'd a chain, or tugg'd an oar. Thy monarchs, arbitrary, fierce, unjust, Themselves the slaves of bigotry or lust, Disdain'd thy counsels; only in distress Found thee a goodly spunge for pow'r to prefs. Thy chiefs, the lords of many a petty fee, Provok'd and harafs'd, in return plagu'd thee; Call'd thee away from peaceable employ, Domestic happiness and rural joy, To waste thy life in arms, or lay it down In causeless feuds and bick'rings of their own, Thy parliaments ador'd, on bended knees, The fov'reignty they were conven'd to please; Whate'er was ask'd, too timid to resist, Comply'd with, and were graciously dismis'd; And, if some Spartan soul a doubt express'd, And, blushing at the tameness of the rest, Dar'd to suppose the subject had a choice, He was a traitor by the gen'ral voice.

6

Oh, slave! with pow'rs thou didst not dare exert,

Verse cannot stoop so low as thy desert;

It shakes the sides of splenetic disdain,

Thou self-entitled ruler of the main,

To trace thee to the date when you fair sea,

That clips thy shores, had no such charms for thee;

When other nations slew from coast to coast,

And thou hadst neither sleet nor slag to boast.

Kneel now, and lay thy forehead in the dust;
Blush, if hou canst; not petrified, thou must;
Act but an honest and a faithful part;
Compare what then thou wast with what thou art;
And, God's disposing providence consess'd,
Obduracy itself must yield the rest.—
Then thou art bound to serve him, and to prove,
Hour after hour, thy gratitude and love.

Has he not hid thee, and thy favour'd land, For ages fafe beneath his shelt'ring hand, Giv'n thee his blessing on the clearest proof, Eid nations leagu'd against thee stand aloof,

V

F

P

T

T

T

W

Su

St

TI

Lil

He

Th

If (

by th

And charg'd hostility and hate to roar Where else they would, but not upon thy shore? His pow'r fecur'd thee when prefumptuous Spain Baptiz'd her fleet invincible in vain. Her gloomy monarch, doubtful and refign'd To ev'ry pang that racks an anxious mind, Ask'd of the waves that broke upon his coast, What tidings? and the furge replied-All loft! And, when the Stuart, leaning on the Scot, Then too much fear'd, and now too much forgot, Pierc'd to the very centre of the realm, And hop'd to feize his abdicated helm, 'Twas but to prove how quickly, with a frown, He that had rais'd thee could have pluck'd thee down. Peculiar is the grace by thee posses'd, Thy foes implacable, thy land at rest; Thy thunders travel over earth and feas, And all at home is pleasure, wealth, and ease. 'Tis thus, extending his tempestuous arm, Thy Maker fills the nations with alarm,

While his own heav'n furveys the troubled scene, And feels no change, unshaken and serene. Freedom, in other lands scarce known to shine, Pours out a flood of splendour upon thine; Thou hast as bright an int'rest in her rays As ever Roman had in Rome's best days, True freedom is where no restraint is known That scripture, justice, and good sense, disown, Where only vice and injury are tied, And all from shore to shore is free beside. Such freedom is - and Windsor's hoary tow'rs Stood trembling at the boldness of thy pow'rs, That won a nymph on that immortal plain, Like her the fabled Phœbus woo'd in vain: He found the laurel only—happier you Th' unfading laurel and the virgin too *!

Now think, if pleasure have a thought to spare;
If God himself be not beneath her care;

^{*} Alluding to the grant of Magna Charta, which was extorted from king John by the Barons at Runnymede near Windfor.

If bus'ness, constant as the wheels of time, Can pause an hour to read a serious rhime; If the new mail thy merchants now receive, Or expectation of the next, give leave; Oh think, if chargeable with deep arrears For fuch indulgence gilding all thy years, How much, though long neglected, shining yet, The beams of heav'nly truth have swell'd the debt! When perfecuting zeal made royal sport With tortur'd innocence in Mary's court, And Bonner, blithe as shepherd at a wake, Enjoy'd the show, and danc'd about the stake; The facred book, its value understood, Receiv'd the feal of martyrdom in blood. Those holy men, so full of truth and grace, Seem, to reflection, of a diffrent race; Meek, modest, venerable, wife, fincere, In fuch a cause they could not dare to fear; They could not purchase earth with such a prize, Or spare a life too short to reach the skies.

E

From them to thee convey'd along the tide, Their streaming hearts pour'd freely when they died; Those truths, which neither use nor years impair, Invite thee, woo thee, to the blis they share. What dotage will not vanity maintain? What web too weak to catch a modern brain? The moles and bats in full affembly find, On special search, the keen-ey'd eagle blind. And did they dream, and art thou wifer now? Prove it—if better, I submit and bow. Wisdom and goodness are twin-born, one heart Must hold both sisters, never seen apart. So then—as darkness overspread the deep, Ere nature rose from her eternal sleep, And this delightful earth, and that fair sky, Leap'd out of nothing, call'd by the Most High; By fuch a change thy darkness is made light, Thy chaos order, and thy weakness might; And He, whose pow'r mere nullity obeys, Who found thee nothing, form'd thee for his praise.

I

I

1

I

To praise him is to serve him, and sulfil,
Doing and suff'ring, his unquestion'd will;
'Tis to believe what men inspir'd of old,
Faithful, and faithfully inform'd, unfold;
Candid and just, with no salse aim in view,
To take for truth what cannot but be true;
To learn in God's own school the Christian part,
And bind the task assign'd thee to thine heart:
Happy the man there seeking and there sound,
Happy the nation where such men abound!

How shall a verse impress thee? by what name
Shall I adjure thee not to court thy shame?
By their's whose bright example, unimpeach'd,
Directs thee to that eminence they reach'd—
Heroes and worthies of days past, thy sires?
Or his, who touch'd their hearts with hallow'd fires?
Their names, alas! in vain reproach an age,
Whom all the vanities they scorn'd engage;
And his, that seraphs tremble at, is hung
Disgracefully on ev'ry trifler's tongue,

Or serves the champion in forensic war To flourish and parade with at the bar. Pleasure herself, perhaps, suggests a plea, If int'rest move thee, to persuade ev'n thee. By ev'ry charm that smiles upon her face, By joys posses'd, and joys still held in chase, If dear fociety be worth a thought, And if the feaft of freedom cloy thee not, Reflect that these, and all that seems thine own. Held by the tenure of his will alone, Like angels in the service of their Lord, Remain with thee, or leave thee at his word; That gratitude and temp'rance in our use Of what he gives, unsparing and profuse, Secure the favour, and enhance the joy, That thankless waste and wild abuse destroy.

But, above all, reflect—how cheap foe'er
Those rights that millions envy thee appear,
And, though resolv'd to risk them, and swim down
The tide of pleasure, heedless of his frown—

That bleffings truly facred, and when giv'n
Mark'd with the fignature and stamp of heav'n,
The word of prophefy, those truths divine
Which make that heav'n if thou desire it thine, (Awful alternative! believ'd, belov'd,
Thy glory; and thy shame, if unimprov'd)
Are never long vouchsaf'd, if push'd aside
With cold disgust or philosophic pride;
And that, judicially withdrawn, disgrace,
Error, and darkness, occupy their place.

A world is up in arms, and thou, a fpot
Not quickly found if negligently fought,
Thy foul as ample as thy bounds are small,
Endur'st the brunt, and dar'st defy them all:
And wilt thou join to this bold enterprize
A bolder still, a contest with the skies?
Remember, if he guard thee and secure,
Whoe'er assails thee, thy success is sure;
But, if he leave thee, though the skill and pow'r
Of nations, sworn to spoil thee and devour,

Were all collected in thy fingle arm,

And thou couldst laugh away the fear of harm,

That strength would fail, oppos'd against the push

And seeble onset of a pigmy rush.

Say not (and, if the thought of such desence Should spring within thy bosom, drive it thence)
What nation amongst all my foes is free
From crimes as base as any charg'd on me?
Their measure fill'd, they too shall pay the debt
Which God, though long forborn, will not forget.
But know that wrath divine, when most severe,
Makes justice still the guide of his career,
And will not punish, in one mingled crowd,
Them without light, and thee without a cloud.

Muse, hang this harp upon you aged beech,
Still murm'ring with the solemn truths I teach;
And, while, at intervals, a cold blast sings
Through the dry leaves, and pants upon the strings,
My soul shall sigh in secret, and lament
A nation scourg'd, yet tardy to repent.

I know the warning song is sung in vain;
That sew will hear, and sewer heed the strain:
But, if a sweeter voice, and one design'd
A blessing to my country and mankind,
Reclaim the wand'ring thousands, and bring home
A slock, so scatter'd and so wont to roam,
Then place it once again between my knees;
The sound of truth will then be sure to please:
And truth alone, where'er my life be cast,
In scenes of plenty or the pining waste,
Shall be my chosen theme, my glory to the last.

H O P E.

doceas iter et sacra ostia pandas.

VIRG. En. 6.

Ask what is human life—the fage replies,
With disappointment low'ring in his eyes,
A painful passage o'er a restless slood,
A vain pursuit of sugitive false good,
A scene of fancied bliss and heart-felt care,
Closing at last in darkness and despair.

I

F

J

I

V

S

E

T

T

B

The poor, inur'd to drudg'ry and diftress, Act without aim, think little, and feel lefs, And no where, but in feign'd Arcadian scenes, Taste happiness, or know what pleasure means. Riches are pass'd away from hand to hand, As fortune, vice, or folly, may command. As in a dance the pair that take the lead Turn downward, and the lowest pair succeed, So shifting and so various is the plan By which Heav'n rules the mixt affairs of man: Vicifitude wheels round the motley crowd, The rich grow poor, the poor become purfe-proud; Bus'ness is labour, and, man's weakness such, Pleasure is labour too, and tires as much, The very fense of it foregoes its use, By repetition pall'd, by age obtuse. Youth loft in diffipation, we deplore, Through life's fad remnant, what no fighs reftore; Our years, a fruitless race without a prize, Too many, yet too few to make us wife.

Dangling his cane about, and taking snuff,
Lothario cries, What philosophic stuff—
Oh, querulous and weak!—whose useless brain
Once thought of nothing, and now thinks in vain;
Whose eye, reverted, weeps o'er all the past,
Whose prospect shows thee a disheart'ning waste;
Would age in thee resign his wintry reign,
And youth invigorate that frame again,
Renew'd desire would grace with other speech
Joys always priz'd—when plac'd within our reach.

For lift thy palfied head, shake off the gloom
That overhangs the borders of thy tomb,
See nature, gay as when she first began,
With smiles alluring her admirer man;
She spreads the morning over eastern hills;
Earth glitters with the drops the night distils;
The sun, obedient, at her call appears
To shing his glories o'er the robe she wears;
Banks cloth'd with slow'rs, groves fill'd with sprightly founds,

The yellow tilth, green meads, rocks, rifing grounds,

Streams edg'd with ofiers, fatt'ning ev'ry field Where'er they flow, now feen and now conceal'd; From the blue rim where skies and mountains meet, Down to the very turf beneath thy feet, Ten thousand charms, that only fools despise, Or pride can look at with indiffrent eyes, All speak one language, all with one sweet voice Cry to her universal realm, Rejoice! Man feels the spur of passions and desires, And the gives largely more than he requires; Not that, his hours devoted all to care, Hollow-ey'd abstinence, and lean despair, The wretch may pine, while to his fmell, tafte, fight, She holds a paradife of rich delight; But gently to rebuke his awkward fear, To prove that what she gives she gives sincere, To banish hesitation, and proclaim His happiness, her dear, her only aim. 'Tis grave philosophy's absurdest dream, That heav'n's intentions are not what they feem,

TA

A So

T

T

T T

T

A

T

To

Sa

Q₁ W

TI

Ju

That only shadows are dispens'd below,

And earth has no reality but woe.

Thus things terrestrial wear a diffrent hue,

As youth or age persuades; and neither true:

So Flora's wreath through colour'd crystal seen,

The rose or lily appears blue or green,

But still th' imputed tints are those alone

The medium represents, and not their own.

To rise at noon, sit slipshod and undress'd,

To read the news, or siddle, as seems best,

'Till half the world comes rattling at his door,

To fill the dull vacuity 'till four;

And, just when ev'ning turns the blue vault gray,

To spend two hours in dressing for the day;

To make the sun a bauble without use,

Save for the fruits his heav'nly beams produce;

Quite to forget, or deem it worth no thought,

Who bids him shine, or if he shine or not;

Through mere necessity to close his eyes

Just when the larks and when the shepherds rise;

VOL. I.

Is fuch a life, fo tediously the fame, So void of all utility or aim, That poor Jonquil, with almost ev'ry breath, Sighs for his exit, vulgarly call'd death: For he, with all his follies, has a mind Not yet so blank, or fashionably blind, But now and then, perhaps, a feeble ray Of diffant wisdom shoots across his way, By which he reads, that life without a plan, As useless as the moment it began, Serves merely as a foil for discontent To thrive in; an incumbrance, ere half spent. Oh! weariness beyond what asses feel, That tread the circuit of the ciftern wheel; A dull rotation, never at a flay, Yesterday's face twin image of to-day; While conversation, an exhausted stock, Grows drowfy as the clicking of a clock. No need, he cries, of gravity stuff'd out With academic dignity devout,

I

7

Is

F

W

Y

L

Be

Ti

Ar

Т

No An

Its

No

To read wife lectures—vanity the text!

Proclaim the remedy, ye learned, next;

For truth, felf-evident, with pomp impress'd,

Is vanity furpassing all the rest.

That remedy, not hid in deeps profound, Yet feldom fought where only to be found, While passion turns aside from its due scope Th' inquirer's aim—that remedy is hope. Life is his gift, from whom whate'er life needs, With ev'ry good and perfect gift, proceeds; Bestow'd on man, like all that we partake, Royally, freely, for his bounty fake; Transient indeed, as is the fleeting hour, And yet the feed of an immortal flow'r; Design'd, in honour of his endless love, To fill with fragrance his abode above; No trifle, howfoever short it seem, And, howfoever shadowy, no dream; Its value, what no thought can afcertain, Nor all an angel's cloquence explain.

Men deal with life as children with their play, Who first misuse, then cast their toys away; Live to no fober purpose, and contend That their Creator had no ferious end. When God and man stand opposite in view, Man's disappointment must of course ensue. The just Creator condescends to write, In beams of inextinguishable light, His names of wisdom, goodness, pow'r, and love, On all that blooms below or shines above; To catch the wand'ring notice of mankind, And teach the world, if not perversely blind, His gracious attributes, and prove the share His offspring hold in his paternal care. If, led from earthly things to things divine, His creature thwart not his august design, Then praise is heard instead of reas'ning pride, And captious cavil and complaint subside. Nature, employ'd in her allotted place, Is hand-maid to the purposes of grace;

By good vouchsas'd, makes known superior good,
And bliss not seen, by blessings understood:
That bliss, reveal'd in scripture, with a glow
Bright as the covenant-ensuring bow,
Fires all his feelings with a noble scorn
Of sensual evil, and thus Hope is born.

Hope sets the stamp of vanity on all
That men have deem'd substantial since the fall,
Yet has the wondrous virtue to educe
From emptiness itself a real use;
And, while she takes, as at a father's hand,
What health and sober appetite demand,
From fading good derives, with chemic art,
That lasting happiness, a thankful heart.
Hope, with uplisted soot set free from earth,
Pants for the place of her ethereal birth,
On steady wings sails through th' immense abyss,
Plucks amaranthine joys from bow'rs of bliss,
And crowns the soul, while yet a mourner here,
With wreaths like those triumphant spirits wear,

F

I

Hope, as an anchor firm and fure, holds fast
The Christian vessel, and desies the blast.
Hope! nothing else can nourish and secure
His new-born virtues, and preserve him pure.
Hope! let the wretch, once conscious of the joy,
Whom now despairing agonies destroy,
Speak, for he can, and none so well as he,
What treasures centre, what delights, in thee.
Had he the gems, the spices, and the land
That boasts the treasure, all at his command;
The fragrant grove, th' inestimable mine,
Were light when weigh'd against one smile of thine.

Though class d and cradled in his nurse's arms,

He shine with all a cherub's artless charms,

Man is the genuine offspring of revolt,

Stubborn and sturdy—a wild ass's colt;

His passens, like the wat'ry stores that sleep

Beneath the smiling surface of the deep,

Wait but the lashes of a wintry storm,

To frown and roar, and shake his feeble form.

From infancy, through childhood's giddy maze,

Froward at school, and fretful in his plays,

The puny tyrant burns to subjugate

The free republic of the whip-gig state.

If one, his equal in athletic frame,

Or, more provoking still, of nobler name,

Dares step across his arbitrary views,

An Iliad, only not in verse, ensues:

The little Greeks look trembling at the scales,

'Till the best tongue, or heaviest hand, prevails.

Now see him launch'd into the world at large.

If priest, supinely droning o'er his charge,

Their sleece his pillow, and his weekly drawl,

Though short, too long, the price he pays for all.

If lawyer, loud whatever cause he plead,

But proudest of the worst, if that succeed.

Perhaps a grave physician, gath'ring sees,

Punctu'lly paid for length'ning out disease;

No Cotton, whose humanity sheds rays

That make superior skill his second praise.

If arms engage him, he devotes to sport His date of life, fo likely to be short. A foldier may be any thing, if brave; So may a tradesman, if not quite a knave. Such stuff the world is made of; and mankind, To passion, int'rest, pleasure, whim, resign'd, Infift on, as if each were his own pope, Forgiveness, and the privilege of hope. But conscience, in some awful filent hour, When captivating lusts have lost their pow'r-Perhaps when fickness, or some fearful dream, Reminds him of religion, hated theme!-Starts from the down on which she lately slept, And tells of laws despis'd, at least not kept; Shows, with a pointing finger but no noise, A pale procession of past finful joys, All witnesses of bleffings foully fcorn'd, And life abus'd, and not to be suborn'd. Mark these, she says; these, summon'd from afar, Begin their march, to meet thee at the bar;

There find a Judge inexorably just,

And perish there, as all presumption must.

Peace be to those (such peace as earth can give) Who live in pleafure, dead ev'n while they live; Born capable, indeed, of heav'nly truth; But down to latest age, from earliest youth, Their mind a wilderness, through want of care, The plough of wisdom never ent'ring there. Peace (if infenfibility may claim A right to the meek honours of her name) To men of pedigree, their noble race, Emulous always of the nearest place To any throne except the throne of grace. (Let cottagers and unenlighten'd fwains Revere the laws they dream that heav'n ordains; Refort on Sundays to the house of pray'r, And ask, and fancy they find, bleffings there.) Themselves, perhaps, when weary they retreat T' enjoy cool nature in a country feat, T' exchange the centre of a thousand trades, For clumps, and lawns, and temples, and cascades,

May now and then their velvet cushions take,

And seem to pray, for good example sake;

Judging, in charity no doubt, the town

Pious enough, and having need of none.

Kind souls! to teach their tenantry to prize

What they themselves, without remorfe, despise:

Nor hope have they, nor fear, of aught to come—

As well for them had prophecy been dumb.

They could have held the conduct they pursue,

Had Paul of Tarsus liv'd and died a Jew:

And truth, propos'd to reas'ners wise as they,

Is a pearl cast—completely cast away.

F

E

I

B

I

T

S

B

E

A

In

T

They die.—Death lends them, pleas'd, and as in sport,
All the grim honours of his ghastly court.

Far other paintings grace the chamber now,
Where late we saw the mimic landscape glow:
The busy heralds hang the sable scene
With mournful 'scutcheons, and dim lamps between;
Proclaim their titles to the crowd around,
But they that wore them move not at the sound;

The coronet, plac'd idly at their head,

Adds nothing now to the degraded dead,

And ev'n the star that glitters on the bier

Can only say—Nobility lies here.

Peace to all such—'twere pity to offend,

By useless censure, whom we cannot mend;

Life without hope can close but in despair—

'Twas there we found them, and must leave them there.

As, when two pilgrims in a forest stray,

Both may be lost, yet each in his own way;

So fares it with the multitudes beguil'd

In vain opinion's waste and dang'rous wild.

Ten thousand rove the brakes and thorns among,

Some eastward, and some westward, and all wrong.

But here, alas! the satal distrence lies—

Each man's belief is right in his own eyes;

And he that blames, what they have blindly chose,

Incurs resentment for the love he shows.

Say, botanist, within whose province fall

The cedar and the hyssop on the wall,

E

H

T

T

A

If

V

C

H

N

H

T

W

B

T

A

Of all that deck the lanes, the fields, the bow'rs, What parts the kindred tribes of weeds and flow'rs? Sweet fcent, or lovely form, or both combin'd, Distinguish ev'ry cultivated kind; The want of both denotes a meaner breed, And Chloe from her garland picks the weed. Thus hopes of ev'ry fort, whatever fect Esteem them, fow them, rear them, and protect, If wild in nature, and not duly found, Gethsemane, in thy dear hallowed ground, That cannot bear the blaze of scripture light, Nor cheer the fpirit, nor refresh the fight, Nor animate the foul to Christian deeds, (Oh cast them from thee!) are weeds, arrant weeds. Ethelred's house, the centre of six ways, Diverging each from each, like equal rays, Himself as bountiful as April rains, Lord paramount of the furrounding plains, Would give relief of bed and board to none, But guests that sought it in th' appointed ONE.

And they might enter at his open door,

Ev'n till his spacious hall would hold no more.

He sent a servant forth by ev'ry road,

To sound his horn and publish it abroad,

That all might mark—knight, menial, high and low—An ord'nance it concern'd them much to know.

If, after all, some headstrong hardy lout

Would disobey, though sure to be shut out,

Could he with reason murmur at his case,

Himself sole author of his own disgrace?

No! the decree was just and without slaw;

And he that made, had right to make, the law;

His sov'reign pow'r and pleasure unrestrain'd,

The wrong was his who wrongfully complain'd.

Yet half mankind maintain a churlish strife
With him the Donor of eternal life,
Because the deed, by which his love confirms
The largess he bestows, prescribes the terms.
Compliance with his will your lot ensures—
Accept it only, and the boon is your's.

7

A

Ί

I

A

F

T

T

If

N

M

T

W

And fure it is as kind to fmile and give, As with a frown to fay-Do this, and live! Love is not pedlar's trump'ry, bought and fold; He will give freely, or he will withhold; His foul abhors a mercenary thought, And him as deeply who abhors it not; He stipulates, indeed, but merely this-That man will freely take an unbought blifs, Will trust him for a faithful gen'rous part, Nor fet a price upon a willing heart. Of all the ways that feem to promife fair, To place you where his faints his presence share, This only can; for this plain cause, express'd In terms as plain-himfelf has flut the reft. But oh the strife, the bick'ring, and debate, The tidings of unpurchas'd heav'n create! The flirted fan, the bridle, and the tofs, All speakers, yet all language at a loss. From stucco'd walls smart arguments rebound; And beaus, adepts in ev'ry thing profound, Die of disdain, or whistle off the sound.

Such is the clamour of rooks, daws, and kites, Th' explosion of the levell'd tube excites, Where mould'ring abbey-walls o'erhang the glade, And oaks coeval spread a mournful shade. The screaming nations, hov'ring in mid air, Loudly refent the stranger's freedom there, And feem to warn him never to repeat His bold intrusion on their dark retreat.

Adieu, Vinosa cries, ere yet he sips The purple bumper, trembling at his lips, Adieu to all morality-if grace Make works a vain ingredient in the case! The Christian hope is-Waiter, draw the cork-If I mistake not-Blockhead! with a fork!-Without good works, whatever fome may boalt, Mere folly and delufion-Sir, your toast !-My firm persuasion is, at least sometimes, That heav'n will weigh man's virtues and his crimes And fave or damn as these or those prevail.

With nice attention, in a righteous scale,

I plant my foot upon this ground of truft, And filence every fear with-God is just. But if perchance, on some dull drizzling day, A thought intrude that fays, or feems to fay, If thus th' important cause is to be tried, Suppose the beam should dip on the wrong side; I foon recover from these needless frights, And, God is merciful—fets all to rights. Thus, between justice, as my prime support, And mercy, fled to as the last refort, I glide and fleal along with heav'n in view, And-pardon me-the bottle stands with you. I never will believe, the col'nel cries, The fanguinary schemes that some devise, Who make the good Creator, on their plan, A being of less equity than man. If appetite, or what divines call luft, Which men comply with, e'en because they must, Be punish'd with perdition, who is pure? Then their's, no doubt, as well as mine, is fure.

7

T A

N B

N

Y

Is A

H

Fai

A

Wi

Ma

An

If sentence of eternal pain belong

To ev'ry sudden slip and transient wrong,

Then heav'n enjoins the fallible and frail

An hopeless task, and damns them if they fail!

My creed (whatever some creed-makers mean

By Athanasian nonsense, or Nicene)

My creed is—he is safe that does his best,

And death's a doom sufficient for the rest.

Right, fays an enfign; and, for aught I fee,
Your faith and mine fubstantially agree;
The best of ev'ry man's performance here
Is to discharge the duties of his sphere.
A lawyer's dealings should be just and fair—
Honesty shines with great advantage there.
Fasting and pray'r sit well upon a priest—
A decent caution and reserve at least.
A soldier's best is courage in the field,
With nothing here that wants to be conceal'd:
Manly deportment, gallant, easy, gay;
An hand as lib'ral as the light of day.

VOL. I.

T

T

V

T

D

I

B

I

Si

A

W

W

Fa

W

Br

W

T

Se

The foldier thus endow'd, who never shrinks, Nor closets up his thought, whate'er he thinks, Who fcorns to do an injury by stealth, Must go to heav'n-and I must drink his health. Sir Smug, he cries, (for lowest at the board -Just made fifth chaplain of his patron lord, His shoulders witnessing by many a shrug How much his feelings fuffered—fat Sir Smug) Your office is to winnow false from true; Come, prophet, drink, and tell us-What think you? Sighing and fmiling as he takes his glass, Which they that woo preferment rarely pass, Fallible man, the church-bred youth replies, Is still found fallible, however wife; And diffring judgments ferve but to declare That truth lies fomewhere, if we knew but where, Of all it ever was my lot to read, Of critics now alive, or long fince dead, The book of all the world that charm'd me most Was-well-a-day, the title page was lost!

The writer well remarks, an heart that knows

To take with gratitude what heaven bestows,

With prudence always ready at our call

To guide our use of it, is all in all.

Doubtless it is.—To which, of my own store,

I superadd a sew essentials more;

But these, excuse the liberty I take,

I wave just now, for conversation sake.——

Spoke like an oracle, they all exclaim,

And add Right Rev'rend to Smug's honour'd name!

And yet our lot is giv'n us in a land
Where bufy arts are never at a ftand;
Where science points her telescopic eye,
Familiar with the wonders of the sky;
Where bold inquiry, diving our of sight,
Brings many a precious pearl of truth to light;
Where nought eludes the persevering quest,
That fashion, taste, or luxury, suggest.

But, above all, in her own light array'd, See mercy's grand apocalypse display'd!

1

C

C

B

Si

P

A

B

F

Pi

Ar

Th

In

Th

Af

Nat

The

The facred book no longer fuffers wrong, Bound in the fetters of an unknown tongue; But speaks with plainness, art could never mend, What simplest minds can soonest comprehend. God gives the word—the preachers throng around, Live from his lips, and spread the glorious found: That found befpeaks falvation on her way, The trumpet of a life-restoring day! 'Tis heard where England's eastern glory shines, And in the gulphs of her Cornubian mines. And still it spreads. See Germany send forth Her fons * to pour it on the farthest north: Fir'd with a zeal peculiar, they defy The rage and rigour of a polar sky, And plant successfully sweet Sharon's rose On icy plains, and in eternal fnows.

Oh, blest within th' enclosure of your rocks,
Nor herds have ye to boast, nor bleating slocks;
No fertilizing streams your fields divide,
That show, revers'd, the villas on their side;

^{*.} The Moravian miffionaries in Greenland. Vide Krantz.

No groves have ye; no cheerful found of bird, Or voice of turtle, in your land is heard; Nor grateful eglantine regales the finell Of those that walk at ev'ning where ye dwell: But winter, arm'd with terrors here unknown, Sits absolute on his unshaken throne; Piles up his stores amidst the frozen waste, And bids the mountains he has built stand fast; Beckons the legions of his storms away From happier scenes, to make your land a prey; Proclaims the foil a conquest he has won, And scorns to share it with the distant sun. -Yet truth is your's, remote, unenvied isle! And peace, the genuine offspring of her smile; The pride of letter'd ignorance, that binds In chains of errour our accomplish'd minds, That decks, with all the splendour of the true, A false religion, is unknown to you. Nature indeed vouchfafes, for our delight, The sweet vicifitudes of day and night;

Soft airs and genial moisture feed and cheer
Field, fruit, and flow'r, and ev'ry creature here;
But brighter beams, than his who fires the skies,
Have ris'n at length on your admiring eyes,
That shoot into your darkest caves the day,
From which our nicer optics turn away.

Here see th' encouragement grace gives to vice,
The dire effect of mercy without price!
What were they? what some sools are made by art,
They were by nature—atheists, head and heart.
The gross idolatry blind heathens teach
Was too refin'd for them, beyond their reach.
Not ev'n the glorious sun—though men revere
The monarch most that seldom will appear,
And though his beams, that quicken where they shine,
May claim some right to be esteem'd divine—
Not e'en the sun, desirable as rare,
Could bend one knee, engage one vot'ry there!
They were, what base credulity believes
True Christians are, dissemblers, drunkards, thieves.

Sp

Th

W

M

Cl

H

A

H

Is F

A

A

N

1

- A

3

(

The full-gorged favage, at his nauseous feast
Spent half the darkness, and snor'd out the rest,
Was one whom justice, on an equal plan,
Denouncing death upon the sins of man,
Might almost have indulged with an escape,
Chargeable only with an human shape.

What are they now?—Morality may spare

Her grave concern, her kind suspicions, there:

The wretch, who once sang wildly, danc'd and laugh'd,
And suck'd in dizzy madness with his draught,
Has wept a silent flood, revers'd his ways,
Is sober, meek, benevolent, and prays,
Feeds sparingly, communicates his store,
Abhors the craft he boasted of before—

And he that stole has learn'd to steal no more.

Well spake the prophet, Let the defert sing,
Where sprang the thorn the spiry fir shall spring,
And where unsightly and rank thistles grew

Shall grow the myrtle and luxuriant yew.

Go now, and with important tone demand On what foundation virtue is to stand, If felf-exalting claims be turn'd adrift,
And grace be grace indeed, and life a gift.
The poor reclaim'd inhabitant, his eyes
Glist'ning at once with pity and surprise,
Amaz'd that shadows should obscure the sight
Of one whose birth was in a land of light,
Shall answer, Hope, sweet hope, has set me free,
And made all pleasures else mere dross to me.

I

I

S

These, amidst scenes as waste as if denied
The common care that waits on all beside,
Wild as if nature there, void of all good,
Play'd only gambols in a frantic mood,
(Yet charge not heav'nly skill with having plann'd
A play-thing world, unworthy of his hand!)
Can see his love, though secret evil lurks
In all we touch, stamp'd plainly on his works;
Deem life a blessing with its numerous woes,
Nor spurn away a gift a God bestows.
Hard task, indeed, o'er arctic seas to roam!
Is hope exotic? grows it not at home?

Yes, but an object, bright as orient morn,

May press the eye too closely to be born;

A distant virtue we can all confess,

It hurts our pride, and moves our envy, less.

Leuconomus (beneath well-founding Greek I flur a name a poet must not speak) Stood pilloried on infamy's high stage, And bore the pelting fcore of half an age; The very butt of flander, and the blot For ev'ry dart that malice ever shot. The man that mentioned bim at once difmis'd All mercy from his lips, and fneer'd and his'd; His crimes were fuch as Sodom never knew, And perjury flood up to swear all true; His aim was mischief, and his zeal pretence, His speech rebellion against common sense; A knave, when tried on honesty's plain rule, And, when by that of reason, a mere fool; The world's best comfort was, his doom was pass'd; Die when he might, he must be damn'd at last.

Thy

Wh

And

Aga

1

Th

He

An

Sci

01

So

T

Su

T

A

B

F

1

Now, truth, perform thine office; wast aside
The curtain drawn by prejudice and pride,
Reveal (the man is dead) to wond'ring eyes
This more than monster in his proper guise.

He lov'd the world that hated him: the tear That dropped upon his Bible was fincere: Affail'd by scandal and the tongue of strife, His only answer was, a blameless life; And he that forg'd, and he that threw, the dart, Had each a brother's int'rest in his heart! Paul's love of Christ, and steadiness unbrib'd, Were copied close in him, and well transcrib'd. He followed Paul-his zeal a kindred flame, His apostolic charity the same, Like him, cross'd cheerfully tempestuous seas, Forfaking country, kindred, friends, and eafe; Like him he labour'd, and, like him, content To bear it, suffer'd shame where'er he went. Blush, calumny! and write upon his tomb, If honest eulogy can spare thee room,

3

Thy deep repentance of thy thousand lies,
Which, aim'd at him, have pierc'd th' offended skies;
And say, Blot out my sin, confess'd, deplor'd,
Against thine image in thy saint, oh Lord!

No blinder bigot, I maintain it still, Than he who must have pleasure, come what will: He laughs, whatever weapon truth may draw, And deems her sharp artillery mere straw. Scripture, indeed, is plain; but God and he, On scripture-ground, are sure to disagree; Some wifer rule must teach him how to live, Than this his Maker has feen fit to give; Supple and flexible as Indian cane, To take the bend his appetites ordain; Contriv'd to fuit frail nature's crazy cafe, And reconcile his lusts with faving grace. By this, with nice precision of design, He draws upon life's map a zig-zag line, That shows how far 'tis safe to follow sin, And where his danger and God's wrath begin.

By this he forms, as pleas'd he sports along, His well pois'd estimate of right and wrong; And finds the modish manners of the day, Though loofe, as harmless as an infant's play. Build by whatever plan caprice decrees, With what materials, on what ground, you pleafe; Your hope shall stand unblam'd, perhaps admir'd, If not that hope the scripture has requir'd. The strange conceits, vain projects, and wild dreams, With which hypocrify for ever teems, (Though other follies strike the public eye, And raise a laugh) pass unmolested by; But if, unblameable in word and thought, A man arife—a man whom God has taught, With all Elijah's dignity of tone, And all the love of the beloved John-To ftorm the citadels they build in air, And fmite th' untemper'd wall; 'tis death to spare! To sweep away all refuges of lies, And place, instead of quirks themselves devise, Lama sabaEthani before their eyes;

To prove that without Christ all gain is loss,

All hope despair, that stands not on his cross;

Except the sew his God may have impress'd,

A tenfold frenzy seizes all the rest.

Throughout mankind, the Christian kind at least, There dwells a confciousness in ev'ry breast, That folly ends where genuine hope begins, And he that finds his heav'n must lose his fins. Nature opposes, with her utmost force, This riving stroke, this ultimate divorce; And, while religion feems to be her view, Hates with a deep fincerity the true: For this—of all that ever influenc'd man, Since Abel worshipp'd, or the world began -This only spares no lust; admits no plea; But makes him, if at all, completely free; Sounds forth the fignal, as the mounts her car, Of an eternal, universal war; Rejects all treaty; penetrates all wiles; Scorns with the fame indiff'rence frowns and fmiles;

Drives through the realms of fin, where riot reels,
And grinds his crown beneath her burning wheels!
Hence all that is in man—pride, paffion, art,
Pow'rs of the mind, and feelings of the heart—
Infenfible of truth's almighty charms,
Starts at her first approach, and sounds, To arms!
While bigotry, with well diffembled fears,
His eyes shut fast, his singers in his ears,
Mighty to parry and push by God's word
With sensels noise, his argument the sword,
Pretends a zeal for godliness and grace,
And spits abhorrence in the Christian's face.

I

I

I

P

G

A

H

0

E

Al

H

TI

TI

Parent of hope, immortal truth! make known
Thy deathless wreaths and triumphs, all thine own:
The silent progress of thy pow'r is such,
Thy means so feeble, and despis'd so much,
That sew believe the wonders thou hast wrought,
And none can teach them but whom thou hast taught.
Oh, see me sworn to serve thee, and command
A painter's skill into a poet's hand!

That, while I, trembling, trace a work divine,
Fancy may stand aloof from the design,
And light, and shade, and ev'ry stroke, be thine.

If ever thou hast felt another's pain, If ever when he figh'd haft figh'd again, If ever on thy eye-lid stood the tear That pity had engender'd, drop one here! This man was happy—had the world's good word, And with it ev'ry joy it can afford; Friendship and love feem'd tenderly at strife, Which most should sweeten his untroubled life: Politely learn'd, and of a gentle race, Good-breeding and good fense gave all a grace, And, whether at the toilette of the fair He laugh'd and trifled, made him welcome there, Or, if in masculine debate he shar'd, Enfur'd him mute attention and regard. Alas, how chang'd !- Expressive of his mind, His eyes are funk, arms folded, head reclin'd; Those awful fyllables, hell, death, and sin, Though whifper'd, plainly tell what works within;

H

E

T

If

U

T

T

SI

If

W

T

H

A

Jo

T

In

0

That conscience there performs her proper part, And writes a doomsday sentence on his heart! Forfaking, and forfaken of all friends, He now perceives where earthly pleasure ends; Hard talk-for one who lately knew no care, And harder still, as learnt beneath despair! His hours no longer pass unmark'd away, A dark importance faddens every day; He hears the notice of the clock, perplex'd, And cries—perhaps eternity strikes next! Sweet music is no longer music here, And laughter founds like madness in his ear: His grief the world of all her pow'r difarms; Wine has no taste, and beauty has no charms: God's holy word, once trivial in his view, Now by the voice of his experience true, Seems, as it is, the fountain whence alone Must spring that hope he pants to make his own. Now let the bright reverse be known abroad; Say man's a worm, and pow'r belongs to God.

As when a felon, whom his country's laws Have justly doom'd for some atrocious cause, Expects, in darkness and heart-chilling fears, The shameful close of all his mispent years; If chance, on heavy pinions flowly born, A tempest usher in the dreaded morn, Upon his dungeon walls the lightning play, The thunder feems to fummon him away, The warder at the door his key applies, Shoots back the bolt, and all his courage dies: If then, just then, all thoughts of mercy lost, When hope, long ling'ring, at last yields the ghost, The found of pardon pierce his ftartled ear, He drops at once his fetters and his fear; A transport glows in all he looks and speaks, And the first thankful tears bedew his cheeks. Joy, far superior joy, that much outweighs The comfort of a few poor added days, Invades, possesses, and o'erwhelms, the foul Of him, whom hope has with a touch made whole.

Sh

T

T

W

T

Se

A

St

A

Bi

T

T

N

N

In

Bu

W

T

'Tis heav'n, all heav'n, descending on the wings
Of the glad legions of the King of kings;
'Tis more—'tis God diffus'd through ev'ry part,
'Tis God himself triumphant in his heart!
Oh, welcome now the sun's once hated light,
His noon-day beams were never half so bright.
Not kindred minds alone are call'd t' employ
Their hours, their days, in list'ning to his joy;
Unconscious nature, all that he surveys,
Rocks, groves, and streams, must join him in his praise.

These are thy glorious works, eternal truth,

The scoff of wither'd age and beardless youth;

These move the censure and illib'ral grin

Of sools that hate thee and delight in sin:

But these shall last when night has quench'd the pole,

And heav'n is all departed as a scroll:

And when, as justice has long since decreed,

This earth shall blaze, and a new world succeed,

Then these thy glorious works, and they who share

That hope which can alone exclude despair,

Shall live exempt from weakness and decay, The brightest wonders of an endless day.

Happy the bard, (if that fair name belong To him that blends no fable with his fong) Whose lines, uniting, by an honest art, The faithful monitor's and poet's part, Seek to delight, that they may mend mankind, And, while they captivate, inform the mind: Still happier, if he till a thankful foil, And fruit reward his honourable toil: But happier far, who comfort those that wait To hear plain truth at Judah's hallow'd gate. Their language fimple, as their manners meek, No shining ornaments have they to seek; Nor labour they, nor time, nor talents, waste, In forting flow'rs to fuit a fickle tafte; But, while they speak the wisdom of the skies, Which art can only darken and disguise, Th' abundant harvest, recompense divine, Repays their work—the gleaning only mine.

CHARITY.

Qua nibil majus meliusve terris

Fata donavere, boniq, divi,

Nec dabunt, quamvis redeant in aurum

Tempora priscum.

Hor. Lib. IV. Ode 2.

E

I

T

FAIREST and foremost of the train, that wait
On man's most dignified and happiest state,
Whether we name thee Charity or love,
Chief grace below, and all in all above,
Prosper (I press thee with a pow'rful plea)
A task I venture on, impell'd by thee:
Oh, never seen but in thy blest effects,
Or selt but in the soul that heav'n selects;

Who feeks to praise thee, and to make thee known
To other hearts, must have thee in his own.
Come, prompt me with benevolent desires,
Teach me to kindle at thy gentle fires,
And, though disgrac'd and slighted, to redeem
A poet's name, by making thee the theme.
God, working ever on a social plan,
By various ties attaches man to man:
He made at first, though free and unconfin'd,

One man the common father of the kind;
That ev'ry tribe, though placed as he sees best,
Where seas or deserts part them from the rest,
Diff'ring in language, manners, or in sace,
Might seel themselves allied to all the race.
When Cook—lamented, and with tears as just
As ever mingled with heroic dust—
Steer'd Britain's oak into a world unknown,
And in his country's glory sought his own,
Wherever he found man, to nature true,
The rights of man were sacred in his view.

He footh'd with gifts, and greeted with a fmile,

The simple native of the new-found isle;

He spurn'd the wretch that slighted or withstood

The tender argument of kindred blood,

Nor would endure that any should controul

His free-born brethren of the southern pole,

But, though some nobler minds a law respect,
That none shall with impunity neglect,
In baser souls unnumber'd evils meet,
To thwart its insuence, and its end deseat.
While Cook is low'd for savage lives he sav'd,
See Cortez odious for a world enslav'd!
Where wast thou then, sweet Charity? where then,
Thou tutelary friend of helpless men?
Wast thou in monkish cells and nunn'ries sound,
Or building hospitals on English ground?
No.—Mammon makes the world his legatee
Through sear, not love; and heav'n abhors the sec.
Wherever sound, (and all men need thy care)
Nor age nor insancy could find thee there,

The hand that flew, 'till it could flay no more, dod I'd Was glu'd to the fword-hilt with Indian gore. It sall A Their prince, as justly feated on his throne was val As vain imperial Philip on his own, it and on his wo. I Trick'd out of all his royalty by art, and one ow That stripp'd him bare, and broke his honest heart, Died, by the fentence of a shaven priest, For scorning what they taught him to detest, of the standard How dark the veil that intercepts the blaze 19 loon? Of heav'n's mysterious purposes and ways ! abase ba A God stood not, though he seem'd to stand, aloof; And at this hour the conqu'ror feels the proof: The wreath he won drew down an inftant curfe, The fretting plague is in the public purfe, The canker'd spoil corrodes the pining state, Starv'd by that indolence their mines create.

Oh, could their ancient Incas rise again,

How would they take up Israel's taunting strain!

Art thou too fall'n, Iberia? Do we see

The robber and the murd'rer weak as we?

N

T

C

C

A

Ir

S

N

B

C

T

S

A

H

T

F

Thou, that haft wasted earth, and dar'd despise
Alike the wrath and mercy of the skies,
Thy pomp is in the grave, thy glory laid
Low in the pits thine avarice has made!
We come with joy from our eternal rest,
To see th' oppressor in his turn oppress'd.
Art thou the god, the thunder of whose hand
Roll'd over all our desolated land,
Shook principalities and kingdoms down,
And made the mountains tremble at his frown?
The sword shall light upon thy boasted pow'rs,
And waste them, as thy sword has wasted our's.

Tis thus Omnipotence his law sulfils,
And vengeance executes what justice wills.

Again—the band of commerce was design'd

T' affociate all the branches of mankind;

And, if a boundless plenty be the robe,

Trade is the golden girdle of the globe.

Wise to promote whatever end he means,

God opens fruitful nature's various scenes:

Each climate needs what other climes produce, And offers fomething to the gen'ral use; No land but liftens to the common call, And in return receives fupply from all. This genial intercourse, and mutual aid, Cheers what were else an universal shade, Calls nature from her ivy mantled den, And foftens human rock-work into men. Ingenious Art, with her expressive face, Steps forth to fashion and refine the race; Not only fills necessity's demand, But overcharges her capacious hand: Capricious taste itself can crave no more Than the fupplies from her abounding store: She strikes out all that luxury can ask, And gains new vigour at her endless task. Her's is the spacious arch, the shapely spire, The painter's pencil, and the poet's lyre; From her the canvass borrows light and shade, And verse, more lasting, hues that never fade.

T

T

In

C

T

T

B

F

V

T

A

A

A

T

L

B

She guides the finger o'er the dancing keys,

Gives difficulty all the grace of ease,

And pours a torrent of fweet notes around,

Fast as the thirsting ear can drink the found.

These are the gifts of art; and art thrives most.

Where commerce has enrich'd the busy coast.

He catches all improvements in his slight,

Spreads foreign wonders in his country's sight,

Imports what others have invented well,

And stirs his own to match them, or excel,

'Tis thus, reciprocating each with each,

Alternately the nations learn and teach;

While providence enjoins to ev'ry soul

An union with the vast terraqueous whole.

Heav'n speed the canvass, gallantly unfurl'd

To furnish and accommodate a world,

To give the pole the produce of the sun,

And knit th' unsocial climates into one.—

Soft airs and gentle heavings of the wave

Impel the fleet whose errand is to save,

To fuccour, wasted regions, and replace The fmile of opulence in forrow's face. Let nothing adverse, nothing unforeseen, Impede the bark that plows the deep ferene, Charg'd with a freight transcending in its worth The gems of India, nature's rareft birth, That flies, like Gabriel on his Lord's commands. An herald of God's love to pagan lands. But, ah! what wish can prosper, or what pray'r, AA For merchants, rich in cargoes of despair, Who drive a loathfome traffic, gage, and fpan, And buy, the muscles and the bones of man? The tender ties of father, husband, friend, All bonds of nature, in that moment end; And each endures, while yet he draws his breath, A stroke as fatal as the scythe of death. The fable warrior, frantic with regret Of her he loves, and never can forget, Loses in tears the far receding shore, But not the thought that they must meet no more;

N

T

T

C

H

Si

L

R

N

F

T

E

T

D

N

F

Depriv'd of her and freedom at a blow,

What has he left that he can yet forego?

Yes, to deep fadness fullenly resign'd,

He feels his body's bondage in his mind;

Puts off his gen'rous nature; and, to suit

His manners with his fate, puts on the brute.

Oh, most degrading of all ills that wait

On man, a mourner in his best estate!

All other forrows virtue may endure,

And find submission more than half a cure;

Grief is itself a med'cine, and bestow'd

T' improve the fortitude that bears the load,

To teach the wand'rer, as his woes increase,

The path of wissom, all whose paths are peace;

But slav'ry!—virtue dreads it as her grave;

Patience itself is meanness in a slave.

Or, if the will and sov'reignty of God

Bid suffer it awhile, and kiss the rod,

Wait for the dawning of a brighter day,

And snap the chain the moment when you may.

Nature imprints upon whate'er we see,

That has a heart and life in it—Be free!

The beasts are charter'd—neither age nor force

Can quell the love of freedom in a horse:

He breaks the cord that held him at the rack;

And, conscious of an unincumber'd back,

Snuffs up the morning air, forgets the rein,

Loose sly his forelock and his ample mane;

Responsive to the distant neigh he neighs;

Nor stops, till, overleaping all delays,

He finds the pasture where his fellows graze.

Canst thou, and honour'd with a Christian name,
Buy what is woman-born, and seel no shame?
Trade in the blood of innocence, and plead
Expedience as a warrant for the deed?
So may the wolf, whom samine has made bold
To quit the forest and invade the fold:
So may the russian, who with ghostly glide,
Dagger in hand, steals close to your bedside;
Not he, but his emergence forc'd the door,
He found it inconvenient to be poor.

Has God then giv'n its sweetness to the cane—
Unless his laws be trampled on—in vain?
Built a brave world, which cannot yet subsist,
Unless his right to rule it be dismiss'd?
Impudent blasphemy!—So folly pleads,
And, av'rice being judge, with ease succeeds.

But grant the plea-and let it stand for just, That man make man his prey because he must; Still there is room for pity to abate, And foothe, the forrows of fo fad a state. A Briton knows—or, if he knows it not, The Scripture plac'd within his reach, he ought-That fouls have no difcriminating hue, 18 17 4111 Alike important in their Maker's view, That none are free from blemish since the fall; And love divine has paid one price for all. The wretch that works and weeps without relief Has one that notices his filent grief. He, from whose hands alone all pow'r proceeds, Ranks its abuse among the foulest deeds, Det incerne and the

Con

But

Beg

Are

Not

To

Ren

To

W

We

Mu

For

Or Elf

Th

Oh

An

Infe

W

Considers all injustice with a frown;

But marks the man that treads his fellow down.

Begone!—the whip and bell in that hard hand.

Are hateful ensigns of usurp'd command.

Not Mexico could purchase kings a claim.

To scourge him, weariness his only blame.

Remember, heav'n has an avenging rod—

To smite the poor is treason against God!

Trouble is grudgingly and hardly brook'd,

While life's fublimest joys are overlook'd:

We wander o'er a sun-burnt thirsty soil,

Murm'ring and weary of our daily toil,

Forget t' enjoy the palm-tree's offer'd shade,

Or taste the sountain in the neighb'ring glade:

Else who would lose, that had the pow'r t' improve,

Th' occasion of transmuting fear to love?

Oh, 'tis a godlike privilege to save!

And he that scorns it is himself a slave.

Inform his mind—one stash of heav'nly day

Would heal his heart and melt his chains away.

Th

W

Go

An

Th

Th

Bu

W

As

Du

Th

Ag

Dr

My

For

But

But

Elf

A

"Beauty for ashes" is a gift indeed!

And slaves, by truth enlarg'd, are doubly freed.

Then would he say, submissive at thy seet,

While gratitude and love made service sweet,

My dear deliv'rer out of hopeless night,

Whose bounty bought me but to give me light,

I was a bondman on my native plain;

Sin forg'd, and ignorance made fast, the chain;

Thy lips have shed instruction as the dew,

Taught me what path to shun and what pursue;

Farewell, my former joys! I sigh no more

For Africa's once lov'd, benighted shore;

Serving a benefactor, I am free—

At my best home, if not exil'd from thee.

Some men make gain a fountain, whence proceeds

A stream of lib'ral and heroic deeds.

The swell of pity, not to be confin'd

Within the scanty limits of the mind,

Disdains the bank, and throws the golden sands,

A rich deposit, on the bord'ring lands:

These have an ear for his paternal call,

Who makes some rich for the supply of all;

God's gift with pleasure in his praise employ,

And Thornton is familiar with the joy.

Oh, could I worship aught beneath the skies That earth hath feen, or fancy can devise, Thine altar, facred liberty, should stand, Built, by no mercenary vulgar hand, With fragrant turf, and flow'rs as wild and fair As ever dress'd a bank, or scented summer air! Duly, as ever on the mountain's height The peep of morning shed a dawning light, Again, when ev'ning in her fober veft Drew the gray curtain of the fading west, My foul should yield thee willing thanks and praise For the chief bleffings of my fairest days: But that were facrilege-praise is not thine, But his who gave thee, and preserves thee mine: Else I would fay, and as I spake bid fly A captive bird into the boundless sky,

V

SI

(

I

B

J

T

T

T

N

B

A

T

S

T

T

This triple realm adgres thee—thou art come From Sparta hither, and art here at home. We feel thy force still active, at this hour Enjoy immunity from prieftly pow'r, While conscience, happier than in ancient years, Owns no superior but the God she fears. Propitious spirit! yet expunge a wrong Thy rights have fuffer'd, and our land, too long. Teach mercy to ten thousand hearts, that share The fears and hopes of a commercial care. Prisons expect the wicked, and were built To bind the lawless, and to punish guilt; But shipwreck, earthquake, battle, fire, and flood, Are mighty mischiefs, not to be withstood; And honest merit stands on slipp'ry ground, Where covert guile and artifice abound. Let just restraint, for public peace design'd, Chain up the wolves and tigers of mankind; The foe of virtue has no claim to thee-But let infolvent innocence go free.

6

Patron of elfe the most despis'd of men. Accept the tribute of a stranger's pen; Verse, like the laurel, its immortal meed, Should be the guerdon of a noble deed; I may alarm thee, but I fear the shame (Charity chosen as my theme and aim) I must incur, forgetting Howard's name. Bleft with all wealth can give thee, to refign Joys doubly fweet to feelings quick as thine, To quit the bliss thy rural scenes bestow To feek a nobler amidst scenes of woe, To traverse seas, range kingdoms, and bring home, Not the proud monuments of Greece or Rome, But knowledge fuch as only dungeons teach, And only fympathy like thine could reach; That grief, fequefter'd from the public stage, Might fmooth her feathers, and enjoy her cage; Speaks a divine ambition, and a zeal, The boldest patriot might be proud to feel. Oh that the voice of clamour and debate, That pleads for peace 'till it difturbs the state,

Were hush'd in favour of thy gen'rous plea-The poor thy clients, and heav'n's fmile thy fee! Philosophy, that does not dream or stray, Walks arm in arm with nature all his way; Compasses earth, dives into it, ascends Whatever steep inquiry recommends, Sees planetary wonders fmoothly roll Round other fystems under her control, Drinks wisdom at the milky stream of light That cheers the filent journey of the night, And brings, at his return, a bosom charg'd With rich instruction, and a foul enlarg'd. The treasur'd sweets of the capacious plan That heav'n spreads wide before the view of man, All prompt his pleas'd pursuit, and to pursue Still prompt him, with a pleafure always new; He, too, has a connecting pow'r, and draws Man to the centre of the common cause; Aiding a dubious and deficient fight With a new medium, and a purer light.

E

F

All truth is precious, if not all divine; And what dilates the pow'rs must needs refine. He reads the fkies, and, watching ev'ry change, Provides the faculties an ampler range; And wins mankind, as his attempts prevail, A prouder station on the gen'ral scale. But reason still, unless divinely taught, Whate'er she learns, learns nothing as she ought; The lamp of revelation only shows-What human wisdom cannot but oppose-That man, in nature's richest mantle clad, And grac'd with all philosophy can add, Though fair without, and luminous within, Is still the progeny and heir of fin. Thus taught, down falls the plumage of his pride; He feels his need of an unerring guide, And knows that, falling, he shall rise no more, Unless the pow'r that bade him stand restore. This is indeed philosophy; this, known, Makes wisdom, worthy of the name, his own;

And, without this-whatever he discuss: Whether the space between the stars and us, Whether he measure earth, compute the sea, Weigh fun-beams, carve a fly, or spit a flea-The folemn trifler, with his boafted skill, Toils much, and is a folemn trifler still: Blind was he born, and, his misguided eyes Grown dim in trifling studies, blind he dies. Self-knowledge, truly learn'd, of course implies The rich possession of a nobler prize; For felf to felf, and God to man, reveal'd, (Two themes to nature's eye for ever feal'd) Are taught by rays that fly with equal pace From the fame centre of enlight'ning grace. Here flay thy foot; -how copious and how clear Th' o'erflowing well of Charity springs here! Hark! 'tis the music of a thousand rills! Some through the groves, fome down the sloping hills, Winding a fecret or an open course, And all supplied from an eternal source.

The ties of nature do but feebly bind,
And commerce partially reclaims, mankind;
Philosophy, without his heav'nly guide,
May blow up felf-conceit, and nourish pride;
But, while his province is the reas'ning part,
Has still a veil of midnight on his heart:
'Tis truth divine, exhibited on earth,
Gives Charity her being and her birth.

Suppose (when thought is warm, and fancy flows, What will not argument sometimes suppose?)

An isse possess'd by creatures of our kind,
Endu'd with reason, yet by nature blind.

Let supposition lend her aid once more,
And land some grave optician on the shore:

He claps his lens, if haply they may see,
Close to the part where vision ought to be;
But finds that, though his tubes affist the sight,
They cannot give it, or make darkness light.

He reads wise lectures, and describes aloud

A sense they know not, to the wond'ring crowd;

He

TH

TH

Sh

T

T

T

V

P

F

S

He talks of light and the prismatic hues,
As men of depth in erudition use;
But all he gains for his harangue is—Well,
What monstrous lies some travellers will tell!

The foul, whose fight all-quick'ning grace renews, Takes the refemblance of the good she views, As di'monds, stript of their opaque disguise, Reflect the noon-day glory of the skies. She speaks of him, her author, guardian, friend, Whose love knew no beginning, knows no end, In language warm as all that love inspires; And, in the glow of her intense desires, Pants to communicate her noble fires. She fees a world ftark blind to what employs Her eager thought, and feeds her flowing joys; Though wisdom hail them, heedless of her call, Flies to fave fome, and feels a pang for all: Herself as weak as her support is strong, She feels that frailty she denied so long; And, from a knowledge of her own disease, Learns to compassionate the sick she sees.

Here see, acquitted of all vain pretence. The reign of genuine Charity commence. Though fcorn repay her sympathetic tears, She still is kind, and still she perseveres; The truth fhe loves a fightless world blaspheme-'Tis childish dotage, a delirious dream! The danger they discern not they deny; Laugh at their only remedy, and die. But still a foul thus touch'd can never cease, Whoever threatens war, to fpeak of peace: Pure in her aim, and in her temper mild. Her wisdom seems the weakness of a child. She makes excuses where she might condemn; Reviled by those that hate her, prays for them; Suspicion lurks not in her artless breast; The worst suggested, she believes the best; Not foon provok'd, however flung and teas'd; And, if perhaps made angry, foon appeas'd; She rather waves than will dispute her right; And, injur'd, makes forgiveness her delight.

Fla

Is 1

H

Bu

TI

Sh

N

E

H

F

Bu

A

A

H

E

W

T

B

W

H

SI

Such was the portrait an apostle drew;
The bright original was one he knew;
Heav'n held his hand—the likeness must be true.

When one, that holds communion with the skies,
Has filled his urn where these pure waters rise,
And once more mingles with us meaner things,
Tis ev'n as if an angel shook his wings;
Immortal fragrance fills the circuit wide,
That tells us whence his treasures are supplied.
So, when a ship, well freighted with the stores
The sun matures on India's spicy shores,
Has dropt her anchor and her canvass surl'd
In some safe haven of our western world,
'Twere vain inquiry to what port she went;
The gale informs us, laden with the scent.

Some feek, when queafy conscience has its qualms,
To lull the painful malady with alms;
But charity, not seign'd, intends alone
Another's good—their's centres in their own;
And, too short liv'd to reach the realms of peace,
Must cease for ever when the poor shall cease.

Flavia, most tender of her own good name, Is rather careless of her fifter's fame: Her superfluity the poor supplies, But, if she touch a character, it dies. The feeming virtue weigh'd against the vice, She deems all fafe, for she has paid the price: No charity but alms aught values she, Except in porcelain on her mantle-tree. How many deeds, with which the world has rung, From pride, in league with ignorance, have fprung! But God o'errules all human follies still, And bends the tough materials to his will. A conflagration, or a wintry flood, Has left fome hundreds without home or food: Extravagance and av'rice shall subscribe, While fame and felf-complacence are the bribe. The brief proclaim'd, it visits ev'ry pew, But first the squire's-a compliment but due: With flow deliberation he unties His glitt'ring purse—that envy of all eyes! And, while the clerk just puzzles out the pfalm, Slides guinea behind guinea in his palm;

Aff

Tha

Tha

By

But

To

Mo

Th

Th

Th

Th

By

Th

Pre

No

Car

An

Alt

WI

Or

'Till, finding (what he might have found before)
A smaller piece amidst the precious store,
Pinch'd close between his singer and his thumb,
He half exhibits, and then drops the sum.
Gold, to be sure!—Throughout the town 'tis told How the good squire gives never less than gold.
From motives such as his, though not the best,
Springs in due time supply for the distress'd;
Not less effectual than what love bestows—
Except that office clips it as it goes.

But, lest I seem to fin against a friend,
And wound the grace I mean to recommend,
(Though vice derided with a just design
Implies no trespass against love divine)
Once more I would adopt the graver style—
A teacher should be sparing of his smile.

Unless a love of virtue light the flame,
Satire is, more than those he brands, to blame;
He hides behind a magisterial air
His own offences, and strips others bare;

Affects, indeed, a most humane concern, That men, if gently tutor'd, will not learn; That mulish folly, not to be reclaim'd By fofter methods, must be made asham'd; But (I might instance in St. Patrick's dean) Too often rails to gratify his spleen. Most fat'rists are indeed a public scourge; Their mildest physic is a farrier's purge; Their acrid temper turns, as foon as ftirr'd, The milk of their good purpose all to curd. Their zeal begotten, as their works rehearfe, By lean despair upon an empty purse, The wild affaffins ftart into the street, Prepar'd to poignard whomfoe'er they meet. No skill in swordmanship, however just, Can be secure against a madman's thrust; And even virtue, so unfairly match'd, Although immortal, may be prick'd or fcratch'd. When fcandal has new minted an old lie, Or tax'd invention for a fresh supply,

W

Pe

Ar

Pe

He

Pe

Th

At

Th

But

Tha

Sol

On

Wh

Nan

Gun

In ft

We

Tha

'Tis called a fatire, and the world appears Gath'ring around it with erected ears: A thousand names are tos'd into the crowd; Some whisper'd foftly, and some twang'd aloud; Just as the fapience of an author's brain Suggests it safe or dang'rous to be plain. Strange! how the frequent interjected dash Quickens a market, and helps off the trash; Th' important letters, that include the reft, Serve as a key to those that are suppress'd; Conjecture gripes the victims in his paw, The world is charm'd, and Scrib. escapes the law. So, when the cold damp shades of night prevail, Worms may be caught by either head or tail; Forcibly drawn from many a close recess, They meet with little pity, no redress; Plung'd in the stream, they lodge upon the mud, Food for the famish'd rovers of the flood.

All zeal for a reform, that gives offence
To peace and charity, is mere pretence:

A bold remark; but which, if well applied, Would humble many a tow'ring poet's pride. Perhaps the man was in a sportive fit, And had no other play-place for his wit; Perhaps, enchanted with the love of fame, He fought the jewel in his neighbour's fhame; Perhaps-whatever end he might purfue, The cause of virtue could not be his view. At ev'ry stroke wit flashes in our eyes; The turns are quick, the polish'd points furprife, But shine with cruel and tremendous charms, That, while they please, possess us with alarms: So have I feen, (and haften'd to the fight On all the wings of holiday delight) Where stands that monument of ancient pow'r, Nam'd with emphatic dignity-the tow'r, Guns, halberts, fwords, and piftols, great and small, In starry forms dispos'd upon the wall. We wonder, as we gazing stand below, That brass and steel should make so fine a show;

T

St

E

Its

T

So

T

T

T

H

Ca

T

T

T

T

To

A

Li

TI

TI

But, though we praise th' exact designer's skill,

Account them implements of mischief still.

No works shall find acceptance, in that day When all disguises shall be rent away, That square not truly with the scripture plan, Nor fpring from love to God, or love to man. As he ordains things, fordid in their birth, To be refolv'd into their parent earth; And, though the foul shall feek superior orbs, Whate'er this world produces, it absorbs; So felf flarts nothing but what tends apace Home to the goal where it began the race. Such as our motive is our aim must be; If this be fervile, that can ne'er be free: If felf employ us, whatfo'er is wrought, We glorify that felf, not him we ought. Such virtues had need prove their own reward, The Judge of all men owes them no regard. True Charity, a plant divinely nurs'd, Fed by the love from which it rose at first,

Thrives against hope; and, in the rudest scene, Storms but enliven its unfading green; Exub'rant is the shadow it supplies; Its fruit on earth, its growth above the skies. To look at him, who form'd us and redeem'd; So glorious now, though once fo difefteem'd; To see a God stretch forth his human hand, T' uphold the boundless scenes of his command; To recollect that, in a form like our's, He bruis'd beneath his feet th' infernal pow'rs, Captivity led captive, rose to claim The wreath he won so dearly in our name; That, thron'd above all height, he condescends To call the few that trust in him his friends: That, in the heav'n of heav'ns, that space he deems Too scanty for th' exertion of his beams, And shines, as if impatient to bestow Life and a kingdom upon worms below; That fight imparts a never-dying flame, Though feeble in degree, in kind the fame. VOL. I.

Like him, the foul, thus kindled from above, Spreads wide her arms of universal love; And, still enlarg'd as she receives the grace, Includes creation in her close embrace. Behold a Christian !- and, without the fires The founder of that name alone inspires, Though all accomplishment, all knowledge meet, To make the shining prodigy complete, Whoever boafts that name—behold a cheat! Were love, in these the world's last doting years, As frequent as the want of it appears, The churches warm'd, they would no longer hold Such frozen figures, stiff as they are cold; Relenting forms would lose their pow'r, or cease; And ev'n the dipt and sprinkled live in peace: Each heart would quit its prison in the breast, And flow in free communion with the reft. The statesman, skill'd in projects dark and deep, Might burn his useless Machiavel, and sleep; His budget, often fill'd, yet always poor, Might fwing at ease behind his study door,

No!

Dift

And

No Sure

Bot

Pel

Did

Av

An

W

Th

Wi

In

Th

Bu

An

Le

Th

An

No longer prey upon our annual rents, Or scare the nation with its big contents: Disbanded legions freely might depart, And flaying man would cease to be an art. No learned disputants would take the field, Sure not to conquer, and fure not to yield; Both sides deceiv'd, if rightly understood, Pelting each other for the public good. Did charity prevail, the press would prove A vehicle of virtue, truth, and love; And I might spare myself the pains to show What few can learn, and all suppose they know. Thus have I fought to grace a ferious lay With many a wild, indeed, but flow'ry spray, In hopes to gain, what else I must have lost, Th' attention pleasure has so much engross'd. But if, unhappily deceiv'd, I dream, And prove too weak for fo divine a theme, Let Charity forgive me a mistake That zeal, not vanity, has chanc'd to make, And spare the poet for his subject's sake.

CONVERSATION.

Nam neq; me tantum venientis sibilus austri, Nec percussa juvant fluctû tam litora, nec quæ Saxosas inter decurrunt slumina valles.

VIRG. Ecl. 5.

No

TH

As

H

So

T

So

W

T

A

Co

Co

T

Sa

H

Bu

W

W

Or

Though nature weigh our talents, and dispense
To ev'ry man his modicum of sense,
And Conversation, in its better part,
May be esteem'd a gift and not an art,
Yet much depends, as in the tiller's toil,
On culture, and the sowing of the soil.
Words learn'd by rote a parrot may rehearse,
But talking is not always to converse;

Not more distinct from harmony divine, The constant creaking of a country fign. As alphabets in ivory employ, Hour after hour, the yet unletter'd boy, Sorting and puzzling with a deal of glee Those seeds of science call'd his A B C; So language in the mouths of the adult, Witness its infignificant refult, Too often proves an implement of play, A toy to sport with and pass time away. Collect at ev'ning what the day brought forth, Compress the fum into its folid worth, And, if it weigh th' importance of a fly, The scales are false, or Algebra a lie. Sacred interpreter of human thought, How few respect or use thee as they ought! But all shall give account of ev'ry wrong, Who dare dishonour or defile the tongue; Who proftitute it in the cause of vice, Or fell their glory at a market-price;

But

Ti

So

No

Th

Gr

So

W

T

A

N

I

V

T

V

Who vote for hire, or point it with lampoon—

The dear-bought placeman, and the cheap buffoon.

There is a prurience in the speech of some, Wrath ftays him, or else God would ftrike them dumb: His wife forbearance has their end in view: They fill their measure, and receive their due. The heathen law-givers of ancient days, Names almost worthy of a Christian's praise, Would drive them forth from the refort of men, And shut up ev'ry fatyr in his den. Oh, come not ye near innocence and truth, Ye worms that eat into the bud of youth! Infectious as impure, your blighting pow'r Taints in its rudiments the promis'd flow'r; Its odour perish'd and its charming hue, Thenceforth 'tis hateful, for it smells of you. Not ev'n the vigorous and headlong rage Of adolescence, or a frmer age, Affords a plea allowable or just For making speech the pamperer of luft;

But, when the breath of age commits the fault,
'Tis nauseous as the vapour of a vault.

So wither'd stumps disgrace the sylvan scene,
No longer fruitful, and no longer green;
The sapless wood, divested of the bark,
Grows sungous, and takes fire at ev'ry spark.

Oaths terminate, as Paul observes, all strife—Some men have surely then a peaceful life!

Whatever subject occupy discourse,
The seats of Vestris, or the naval sorce,
Asseveration, blust ring in your sace,
Makes contradiction such an hopeless case:
In ev'ry tale they tell, or salse or true,
Well known, or such as no man ever knew,
They six attention, heedless of your pain,
With oaths, like rivets, forc'd into the brain;
And ev'n when sober truth prevails throughout,
They swear it, 'till affirmance breeds a doubt.
A Persian, humble servant of the sun,
Who, though devout, yet bigotry had none,

Div

An

Oh

No

Th

I a

Ti

A

No

No

A

Ro

Di

T

Bu

T

T

Is

Se

K

Hearing a lawyer, grave in his address,

With adjurations ev'ry word impress,

Suppos'd the man a bishop, or at least,

God's name so much upon his lips, a priest;

Bow'd at the close with all his graceful airs,

And begg'd an int'rest in his frequent pray'rs.

Go, quit the rank to which ye stood preferr'd,

Hencesorth associate in one common herd;

Religion, virtue, reason, common sense,

Pronounce your human form a salse pretence;

A mere disguise, in which a devil lurks,

Who yet betrays his secret by his works.

Ye pow'rs who rule the tongue, if such there are,

And make colloquial happiness your care,

Preserve me from the thing I dread and hate—

A duel in the form of a debate.

The clash of arguments and jar of words,

Worse than the mortal brunt of rival swords,

Decide no question with their tedious length,

(For opposition gives opinion strength)

Divert the champions, prodigal of breath, And put the peaceably-disposed to death. Oh, thwart me not, fir Soph, at ev'ry turn, Nor carp at ev'ry flaw you may discern; Though fyllogifms hang not on my tongue, I am not furely always in the wrong! 'Tis hard if all is false that I advance— A fool must now and then be right, by chance. nerty Della Not that all freedom of diffent I blame; No-there I grant the privilege I claim. A disputable point is no man's ground; Rove where you please, 'tis common all around. Discourse may want an animated-No, To brush the surface and to make it flow; But still remember, if you mean to please, To press your point with modesty and ease. The mark, at which my juster aim I take, Is contradiction for its own dear fake. Set your opinion at whatever pitch, Knots and impediments make fomething hitch.

Adopt his own, 'tis equally in vain,
Your thread of argument is snapt again;
The wrangler, rather than accord with you,
Will judge himself deceiv'd, and prove it too.
Vociferated logic kills me quite;
A noisy man is always in the right—
I twirl my thumbs, fall back into my chair,
Fix on the wainscot a distressful stare,
And, when I hope his blunders are all out,
Reply discreetly—To be sure—no doubt!

Yes—you may catch him tripping if you can.
He would not, with a peremptory tone,
Affert the nose upon his face his own;
With hesitation admirably slow,
He humbly hopes—presumes—it may be so.
His evidence, if he were call'd by law
To swear to some enormity he saw,
For want of prominence and just relief,
Would hang an honest man, and save a thief.

Through constant dread of giving truth offence, He ties up all his hearers in suspense; Knows what he knows as if he knew it not, What he remembers feems to have forgot; His fole opinion, whatfoe'er befall, Cent'ring at last in having none at all. Yet, though he tease and baulk your list'ning ear, He makes one useful point exceeding clear; Howe'er ingenious on his darling theme A fceptic in philosophy may feem, Reduc'd to practice, his beloved rule Would only prove him a confummate fool; Useless in him alike both brain and speech, Fate having plac'd all truth above his reach, His ambiguities his total fum, He might as well be blind, and deaf, and dumb. Where men of judgment creep and feel their way.

The positive pronounce without dismay;
Their want of light and intellect supplied

By sparks absurdity strikes out of pride:

Th

Spr

An

Tr

Ti

Ma

Th

Th

Pe

Th

Th

Ar

T

Le

At

A

T

O

0

W

Without the means of knowing right from wrong,
They always are decifive, clear, and strong.
Where others toil with philosophic force,
Their nimble nonsense takes a shorter course;
Flings at your head conviction in the lump,
And gains remote conclusions at a jump:
Their own desect, invisible to them,
Seen in another, they at once condemn;
And, though self-idoliz'd in ev'ry case,
Hate their own likeness in a brother's sace.
The cause is plain, and not to be denied,
The proud are always most provok'd by pride.
Few competitions but engender spite;
And those the most, where neither has a right.
The point of honour has been deem'd of use

The point of honour has been deem'd of use,
To teach good manners, and to curb abuse.
Admit it true, the consequence is clear,
Our polish'd manners are a mask we wear,
And at the bottom barb'rous still and rude;
We are restrain'd, indeed, but not subdued,

The very remedy, however fore, Springs from the mischief it intends to cure, And favage in its principle appears, Tried, as it should be, by the fruit it bears. 'Tis hard, indeed, if nothing will defend Mankind from quarrels but their fatal end; That now and then an hero must decease, That the furviving world may live in peace. Perhaps at last close scrutiny may show The practice dastardly, and mean, and low; That men engage in it compell'd by force: And fear, not courage, is its proper fource. The fear of tyrant custom, and the fear Lest fops should censure us, and fools should sneer. At least to trample on our Maker's laws, And hazard life for any or no cause, To rush into a fixt eternal state Out of the very flames of rage and hate, Or fend another shiv'ring to the bar With all the guilt of fuch unnat'ral war,

Whatever use may urge, or honour plead, On reason's verdict is a madman's deed. Am I to fet my life upon a throw, Because a bear is rude and furly? No-A moral, fenfible, and well-bred man Will not affront me, and no other can. Were I empow'r'd to regulate the lifts, They should encounter with well-loaded fists; A Trojan combat would be fomething new. Let DARES beat ENTELLUS black and blue; Then each might show, to his admiring friends, In honourable bumps his rich amends, And carry, in contusions of his skull, A fatisfactory receipt in full.

A flory, in which native humour reigns, Is often useful, always entertains: A graver fact, enlifted on your fide, May furnish illustration, well applied; But fedentary weavers of long tales Give me the fidgets, and my patience fails.

'Tis

And

To

Em

At

The

We

And

The

Still

Cn

And

Of

Th

Is t

An

Cre

Ar

W

Ye

'Tis the most asinine employ on earth, To hear them tell of parentage and birth, And echo conversations, dull and dry, Embellish'd with-He faid, and So faid I. At ev'ry interview their route the fame, The repetition makes attention lame; We buftle up with unfuccefsful speed, And in the faddest part cry—Droll indeed! The path of narrative with care purfue, Still making probability your clue; On all the vestiges of truth attend, And let them guide you to a decent end. Of all ambitions man may entertain, The worst that can invade a sickly brain Is that which angles hourly for furprife, And baits its hook with prodigies and lies. Credulous infancy, or age as weak, Are fittest auditors for such to seek, Who to please others will themselves disgrace; Yet please not, but affront you to your face.

Suc

Im

Per

Ur

Th

TI

TI

T

Bu

A

A

T

T

V

A

F

A

A great retailer of this curlous ware,

Having unloaded and made many stare,

Can this be true?—an arch observer cries.

Yes, (rather mov'd) I saw it with these eyes!

Sir! I believe it on that ground alone;

I could not, had I seen it with my own.

A tale should be judicious, clear, succinct;

The language plain, and incidents well link'd;

Tell not as new what ev'ry body knows;

And, new or old, still hasten to a close;

There, cent'ring in a focus round and neat,

Let all your rays of information meet.

What neither yields us profit or delight

Is like a nurse's lullaby at night;

Guy Earl of Warwick and fair Eleanore;

Or giant killing Jack, would please me more.

The pipe, with solemn interposing puff,

Makes half a sentence at a time enough;

The dozing sages drop the drowsy strain,

Then pause, and puff—and speak, and pause again.

Such often, like the tube they fo admire, Important triflers! have more fmoke than fire. Pernicious weed! whose scent the fair annoys, Unfriendly to fociety's chief joys, Thy worst effect is banishing for hours The fex whose presence civilizes our's: Thou art, indeed, the drug a gard'ner wants, To poison vermin that infest his plants; But are we fo to wit and beauty blind, As to despise the glory of our kind, Entry on a riend And show the softest minds and fairest forms As little mercy as he grubs and worms? They dare not wait the riotous abuse, Thy thirst-creating steams at length produce, When wine has giv'n indecent language birth, And forced the flood-gates of licentious mirth; For sea-born Venus her attachment shows, Still to that element from which she rose, And, with a quiet which no fumes diffurb, Sips meek infusions of a milder herb.

VOL. I.

B

wed loss

Th' emphatic speaker dearly loves t' oppose, In contact inconvenient, nofe to nofe, As if the gnomen on his neighbour's phiz, Touch'd with a magnet, had attracted his. His whisper'd theme, dilated and at large, Proves after all a wind-gun's airy charge, An extract of his diary-no more, distract of his undil A tasteless journal of the day before. He walk'd abroad, o'ertaken in the rain Call'd on a friend, drank tea, stept home again, Refum'd his purpose, had a world of talk With one he stumbled on, and lost his walk. I interrupt him with a fudden bow, Adieu, dear Sir! lest you should lose it now.

I cannot talk with civet in the room, A fine pus-gentleman that's all perfume; The fight's enough-no need to fmell a beau-Who thrusts his nose into a raree-show? His odoriferous attempts to pleafe, Perhaps might prosper with a swarm of bees;

But we that make no honey, thought we fting, and and and Poets, are fometimes apt to maul the thing. It is boil of 'Tis wrong to bring into a mixt refort, is not smoot. What makes fome fick, and others a-la-most; added I An argument of cogence, we may fay, it was a wig back. Why fuch an one should keep himself away.

A graver coxcomb we may fometimes fee,

Quite as abfurd, though not so light as he:

A shallow brain behind a ferious mask,

An oracle within an empty cask,

The solemn sop; significant and budge;

A fool with judges, amongst sools a judge.

He says but little, and that little said

Owes all its weight, like loaded dice, to lead.

His wit invites you by his looks to come,

But when you knock it never is at home:

'Tis like a parcel sent you by the slage,

Some handsome present, as your hopes presage;

'Tis heavy, bulky, and bids fair to prove

An absent friend's sidelity and love,

Y

T

T

Y

H

T

V

H

Y

F

Y

F

A

F

T

F

C

But when unpack'd your disappointment groans

To find it stuff'd with brickbats, earth, and stones.

Some men employ their health, an ugly trick,

In making known how oft they have been fick,

And give us, in recitals of disease,

A doctor's trouble, but without the fees;

How an emetic or cathartic sped;

Nothing is slightly touch'd, much less forgot,

Nose, ears, and eyes, seem present on the spot.

Now the distemper, spite of draught or pill,

Victorious feem'd, and now the doctor's skill;

And now—alas for unforeseen mishaps!

They put on a damp night-cap and relapse;

They thought they must have died they were so bad-

Their peevish hearers almost wish they had.

Some fretful tempers wince at ev'ry touch,

You always do too little or too much:

You speak with life, in hopes to entertain,

Your elevated voice goes through the brain;

You fall at once into a lower key, That's worse—the drone-pipe of an humble bee. The fouthern fash admits too strong a light, You rise and drop the curtain—now it's night. He shakes with cold - you stir the fire and strive To make a blaze—that's roafting him alive. Serve him with ven'fon, and he chooses fish; With foal—that's just the fort he would not wish. He takes what he at first profes'd to loath, And in due time feeds heartily on both; Yet still, o'erclouded with a constant frown, He does not fwallow, but he gulps it down. Your hope to please him, vain on ev'ry plan, Himself should work that wonder, if he can-Alas! his efforts double his diftrefs, He likes your's little, and his own still less. Thus always teasing others, always teas'd, His only pleasure is—to be displeas'd.

I pity bashful men who feel the pain Of fancied scorn and undeserv'd disdain,

In

T

E

And bear the marks, upon a blushing face, Of needless shame and self-impos'd disgrace. Our sensibilities are so acute, The fear of being filent makes us mute. We foretimes think we could a speech produce, Much to the purpose, if our tongues were loose; But, being tried, it dies upon the lip, Faint as a chicken's note that has the pip: Our wasted oil unprofitably burns, Like hidden lamps in old fepulchral urns. Few Frenchmen of this evil have complain'd; It seems as if we Britons were ordain'd, By way of wholesome curb upon our pride, To fear each other, fearing none beside. The cause perhaps inquiry may descry, Self-fearching with an introverted eye, Conceal'd within an unsuspected part, The vainest corner of our own vain heart: For ever aiming at the world's efteem, Our felf-importance ruins its own scheme;

In other eyes our talents rarely shown, Become at length fo splendid in our own, We dare not risque them into public view, Lest they miscarry of what seems their due. True modesty is a discerning grace, And only blushes in the proper place; But counterfeit is blind, and skulks through fear, Where 'tis a shame to be asham'd t' appear: Humility the parent of the first; The last by vanity produc'd and nurst. The circle form'd, we fit in filent state, Like figures drawn upon a dial-plate; Yes ma'am, and no ma'am, utter'd foftly, show Ev'ry five minutes how the minutes go; Each individual fuffering a constraint Poetry may, but colours cannot paint; And, if in close committee on the sky, Reports it hot or cold, or wet or dry; And finds a changing clime an happy fource Of wife reflection and well-tim'd discourse.

We next inquire, but foftly and by ftealth, Like conservators of the public health, Of epidemic throats, if fuch there are, And coughs, and rheums, and phthific, and catarrh. That theme exhausted, a wide chasm ensues, Fill'd up at last with interesting news; Who dane'd with whom, and who are like to wed, And who is hang'd, and who is brought to bed; But fear to call a more important cause, As if 'twere treason against English laws. The visit paid, with ecstasy we come, As from a feven years transportation, home, And there resume an unembarrass'd brow, Recov'ring what we loft we know not how, The faculties that feem'd reduc'd to nought, Expression and the privilege of thought.

The recking, roaring hero of the chafe,

I give him over as a desp'rate case.

Physicians write in hopes to work a cure,

Never, if honest ones, when death is sure;

And

A r

WI

Or

Th

To

Pr

T

If

W

0

T

T

L

1

I

And though the fox he follows may be tam'd, A mere fox-follower never is reclaim'd. Some farrier should prescribe his proper course, Whose only fit companion is his horse, Or if, deserving of a better doom, The noble beast judge otherwise, his groom. Yet ev'n the rogue that serves him, though he stand To take his honour's orders, cap in hand, Prefers his fellow-grooms, with much good fenfe, Their skill a truth, his master's a pretence. If neither horse nor groom affect the squire, Where can at last his jockeyship retire; Oh to the club, the scene of savage joys, The school of coarse good fellowship and noise; There, in the sweet society of those Whose friendship from his boyish years he chose, Let him improve his talent if he can, Till none but beafts acknowledge him a man. Man's heart had been impenetrably feal'd,

Like their's that cleave the flood or graze the field,

Had not his Maker's all-bestowing hand Giv'n him a foul, and bade him understand; gram A The reas'ning pow'r vouchfaf'd of course inferr'd The pow'r to clothe that reason with his word; For all is perfect that God works on earth, And he that gives conception, aids the birth. If this be plain, 'tis plainly understood, What uses of his boon the giver would. The mind, dispatch'd upon her busy toil, Should range where Providence has bleft the foil; Visiting ev'ry flow'r with labour meet, And gathering all her treasures sweet by sweet, She should imbue the tongue with what she sips, And fhed the balmy bleffing on the lips, That good diffus'd may more abundant grow, And speech may praise the pow'r that bids it flow. Will the fweet warbler of the live-long night, That fills the lift'ning lover with delight, Forget his harmony, with rapture heard, To learn the twitt'ring of a meaner bird,

Or

Th

Sta

To

Is

In

Ye

W

W

Aı

T

Н

T

P

A

C

1

Н

T

Or make the parror's mimicry his choice, a want and That odious libel on an human voice? No-nature unsophisticate by man, Starts not afide from her Creator's plan; The melody that was at first defign'd To cheer the rude forefathers of mankind, Is note for note deliver'd in our ears, In the last scene of her six thousand years: Yet fashion, leader of a chatt'ring train, Whom man for his own hurt permits to reign, Who shifts and changes all things but his shape, And would degrade her vot'ry to an ape, The fruitful parent of abuse and wrong, Holds an usurp'd dominion o'er his tongue; There fits and prompts him with his own difgrace, Prescribes the theme, the tone and the grimace, And, when accomplish'd in her wayward school, Calls gentleman whom she has made a fool. 'Tis an unalterable fix'd decree That none could frame or ratify but she,

That heav'n and hell, and righteousness and sin, Snares in his path and foes that lurk within, God and his attributes (a field of day Where 'tis an angel's happiness to stray), Fruits of his love and wonders of his might, Be never nam'd in ears esteem'd polite. That he who dares, when she forbids, be grave, Shall fland profcrib'd, a madman or a knave, A close designer not to be believ'd, Or, if excus'd that charge, at least deceiv'd. Oh folly worthy of the nurse's lap, Give it the breast, or stop its mouth with pap! Is it incredible, or can it feem A dream to any except those that dream, That man should love his Maker, and that fire, Warming his heart, should at his lips transpire? Know then, and modeftly let fall your eyes, And veil your daring crest that braves the skies; That air of infolence affronts your God, You need his pardon, and provoke his rod:

Now

Kno

For

The

Tho

Acq

By f

And

Hav

Go,

Sur

.

To

Th

Yo

Th

-

So

Tv

T

Now, in a posture that becomes you more Than that heroic strut assum'd before, the manual of Know, your arrears with ev'ry hour accrue, and you'll For mercy shown, while wrath is justly due. The time is short, and there are fouls on earth, Though future pain may ferve for prefent mirth, A Acquainted with the woes that fear or shame, By fashion taught, forbade them once to name, And, having felt the pangs you deem a jeft, work you Have prov'd them truths too big to be express'd: Go, feek on revelation's hallow'd ground, Sure to fucceed, the remedy they found; Touch'd by that pow'r that you have dar'd to mock, That makes feas stable, and disfolves the rock, Your heart shall yield a life-renewing stream, That fools, as you have done, shall call a dream. It happen'd, on a folemn even-tide, Soon after He that was our furety died, Two bosom friends, each pensively inclin'd, The scene of all those forrows left behind,

Sought their own village, busied as they went, in In musings worthy of the great event: They spake of him they lov'd, of him whose life, Though blameless, had incurr'd perpetual ftrife, Whose deeds had left, in spite of hostile arts, A deep memorial graven on their hearts. The recollection, like a vein of ore, The farther trac'd, enrich'd them still the more; They thought him, and they justly thought him, one Sent to do more than he appear'd t' have done; T' exalt a people, and to place them high Above all else, and wonder'd he should die. Ere yet they brought their journey to an end, A stranger join'd them, courteous as a friend, And ask'd them, with a kind engaging air, What their affliction was, and begg'd a share. Inform'd, he gather'd up the broken thread, And, truth and wisdom gracing all he said, Explain'd, illustrated, and fearch'd fo well, The tender theme on which they chose to dwell,

Tha

We

And

He

And

Did

Did

1

Ma

But

Ch

Th

....

Th

An

Fo

To

W

M

That reaching home, the night, they faid, is hear,

We must not now be parted, sojourn here—

The new acquaintance soon became a guest,

And made so welcome at their simple seast,

He bless'd the bread, but vanish'd at the word,

And lest them both exclaiming, "Twas the Lord!

Did not our hearts feel all he deign'd to say,

Did they not burn within us by the way?

Man to maintain, and fuch as God approves:

Their views indeed were indiffinet and dim,

But yet fuccessful, being aim'd at him.

Christ and his character their only stope,

Their object, and their subject, and their hope,

They selt what it became them much to feel,

And, wanting him to loose the facred seal,

Found him as prompt as their desire was true

To spread the new-born glories in their view.

Well—what are ages and the lapse of time,

Match'd against truths, as lasting as sublime?

Can length of years on God himself exact, Or make that fiction which was once a fact? The start of No-marble and recording brafs decay, And like the graver's mem'ry pass away; The works of man inherit, as is just, Their authors' frailty, and return to dust; But truth divine for ever flands fecure, Its head is guarded as its base is sure; Fix'd in the rolling flood of endless years, The pillar of th' eternal plan appears, The raving ftorm and dashing wave defies, Built by that architect who built the skies. Hearts may be found, that harbour at this hour That love of Christ in all its quick'ning power; And lips unstain'd by folly or by strife, Whose wisdom, drawn from the deep well of life, Taftes of its healthful origin, and flows A Jordan for th' ablution of our woes. Oh days of heav'n, and nights of equal praise, Serene and peaceful as those heav'nly days,

Wh

Dif

And

Of

Up

Lik

Car

An

Mi

WI

An

Con

W

Lea

An

Kn

When fouls drawn upwards, in communion fweet, at al Enjoy the stillness of some close retreat, and sell the Discourse, as if releas'd and fafe at home, o segod as) Of dangers paft and wonders yet to come, a smoot and T And spread the facred treasures of the breast o mindo Upon the lap of covenanted reft. at a fiel daigned al What, always dreaming over heav'nly things, Like angel heads in stone with pigeon-wings and ba A Canting and whining out all day the word, it saving the And half the night? fanatic and abfurd ! half my ba A Mine be the friend less frequent in his pray'rs, And A Who makes no buftle with his foul's affairs, dr mand A Whose wit can brighten up a wintry day, and auor of V And chase the splenetic dull hours away; a avewin all Content on earth in earthly things to shine, Who waits for heav'n ere he becomes divine, Leaves faints t' enjoy those altitudes they teach, And plucks the fruit plac'd more within his reach.

Well spoken, Advocate of sin and shame,
Known by thy bleating—Ignorance thy name.

VOL. I.

Is fparkling wit the world's exclusive right, The fixt fee-fimple of the vain and light? Can hopes of heav'n, bright prospects of an hour, That come to waft us out of forrow's pow'r, Obscure or quench a faculty that finds the board but Its happiest foil in the serenest minds? To got and and Religion curbs indeed its wanton play, which is the life And brings the trifler under rig'rous fway, degree and But gives it usefulness unknown before, in beautiful And, purifying, makes it shine the more. A Christian's wit is inoffensive light, basis and see and A beam that aids, but never grieves the fight; Vig'rous in age as in the flush of youth, and it was all the Tis always active on the fide of truth; Temp'rance and peace infure its healthful state, And make it brightest at its latest date. Oh I have feen (nor hope perhaps in vain, Ere life go down, to see such fights again) A vet'ran warrior in the Christian field, Who never faw the fword he could not wield; .r.Joy

Gra

Ex

A

W

...

Ha

Co

Or

Hi

W

Ye

An

Tl

H

A

Bu

W

Su

A

Grave without dulnefs, learned without pride, and T Exact, yet not precise, though meek, keen-ey'd; A man that would have foiled, at their own play, A dozen would-be's of the modern day; Who, when occasion justified its use, Had wit as bright as ready to produce, Could fetch from records of an earlier age, Or from philosophy's enlighten'd page, was an indir His rich materials, and regale your ear With strains it was a privilege to hear: Yet, above all, his luxury fupreme, And his chief glory, was the gospel theme; There he was copious as old Greece or Rome, His happy eloquence feem'd there at home, Ambitious not to shine or to excel, But to treat justly what he lov'd fo well.

It moves me more perhaps than folly ought,
When some green heads, as void of wit as thought,
Suppose themselves monopolists of sense,
And wifer men's ability pretence.

A

I

7

E

1

B

A

T

A

7

(

I

Though time will wear us, and we must grow old, Such men are not forgot as foon as cold, Their fragrant mem'ry will out-last their tomb, Embalm'd for ever in its own perfume: And, to fay truth, though in its early prime, And when unftain'd with any groffer crime, Youth has a sprightliness and fire to boast, That in the valley of decline are loft, And virtue with peculiar charms appears, Crown'd with the garland of life's blooming years; Yet age, by long experience well inform'd, Well read, well temper'd, with religion warm'd, That fire abated which impels rash youth, Proud of his speed to evershoot the truth, As time improves the grape's authentic juice, Mellows and makes the speech more fit for use, And claims a rev'rence in its short'ning day, That 'tis an honour and a joy to pay. The fruits of age, less fair, are yet more found, Than those a brighter season pours around;

And, like the stores autumnal suns mature,

Through wintry rigours unimpair'd endure.

What is fanatic frenzy, fcorn'd fo much, And dreaded more than a contagious touch? I grant it dang'rous, and approve your fear, That fire is catching if you draw too near; But fage observers oft mistake the flame, And give true piety that odious name. To tremble (as the creature of an hour Ought at the view of an almighty power) Before his presence, at whose awful throne, All tremble in all worlds, except your own, To fupplicate his mercy, love his ways, And prize them above pleasure, wealth, or praise, Though common fense allow'd a casting voice, And, free from bias, must approve the choice, Convicts a man fanatic in th' extreme, And wild as madness in the world's esteem. But that disease, when soberly defin'd, Is the false fire of an o'erheated mind;

En

De

Ca

A

Bu

0

A

T

D

F

F

M

A

G

S

1

1

I

It views the truth with a difforted eye,
And either warps or lays it useless by;
'Tis narrow, selfish, arrogant, and draws
Its fordid nourishment from man's applause;
And, while at heart sin unrelinquish'd lies,
Presumes itself chief sav'rite of the skies.
'Tis such a light as putrefaction breeds
In sly-blown slesh whereon the maggot seeds,
Shines in the dark, but, usher'd into day,
The stench remains, the lustre dies away.

True bliss, if man may reach it, is compos'd

Of hearts in union mutually disclos'd;

And, farewell else all hope of pure delight,

Those hearts should be reclaim'd, renew'd, upright.

Bad men, profaning friendship's hallow'd name,

Form, in its stead, a covenant of shame,

A dark confed'racy against the laws

Of virtue, and religion's glorious cause:

They build each other up with dreadful skill,

As bastions set point-blank against God's will;

Enlarge and fortify the dread redoubt,

Deeply refolv'd to shut a Saviour out;

Call legions up from hell to back the deed;

And, curst with conquest, sinally succeed.

But souls that carry on a blest exchange

Of joys they meet with in their heav'nly range,

And with a fearless considence make known

The forrows sympathy esteems its own,

Daily derive increasing light and force

From such communion in their pleasant course,

Feel less the journey's roughness and its length,

Meet their opposers with united strength,

And, one in heart, in int'rest, and design,

Gird up each other to the race divine.

But Conversation, choose what theme we may,
And chiefly when religion leads the way,
Should flow, like waters after summer show'rs,
Not as if rais'd by mere mechanic pow'rs.
The Christian, in whose soul, though now distress'd,
Lives the dear thought of joys he once posses'd,

Wh

As'

An

An

Th

Ke

No

G

W

C

Bu

T

C

P

F

When all his glowing language iffued forth
With God's deep stamp upon its current worth,
Will speak without disguise, and must impart,
Sad as it is, his undissembling heart,
Abhors constraint, and dares not seign a zeal,
Or seem to boast a fire, he does not seel.
The song of Sion is a tasteless thing,
Unless, when rising on a joyful wing,
The soul can mix with the celestial bands,
And give the strain the compass it demands.
Strange tidings these to tell a world who treat

Strange tidings these to tell a world who treat
All but their own experience as deceit!
Will they believe, though credulous enough
To swallow much upon much weaker proof,
That there are blest inhabitants of earth,
Partakers of a new ethereal birth,
Their hopes, desires, and purposes estrang'd
From things terrestrial, and divinely chang'd,
Their very language of a kind that speaks
The soul's sure int'rest in the good she seeks,

Who deal with scripture, its importance felt, As Tully with philosophy once dealt, and soland bnA) And in the filent watches of the night, And through the scenes of toil-renewing light, The focial walk, or folitary ride, Keep still the dear companion at their side? No-shame upon a felf-disgracing age, God's work may ferve an ape upon a stage With fuch a jest as fill'd with hellish glee Certain invisibles as shrewd as he; But veneration or respect finds none, Save from the subjects of that work alone. The world grown old, her deep discernment shows, Claps spectales on her fagacious nose, Peruses closely the true Christian's face, And finds it a mere mask of sly grimace, Usurps God's office, lays his bosom bare, And finds hypocrify close lurking there, And, ferving God herfelf, through mere constraint, Concludes his unfeign'd love of him, a feint.

T

T

T

H

T

S

I

T

T

A

And yet, God knows, look human nature through, (And in due time the world shall know it too) That fince the flow'rs of Eden felt the blaft, That after man's defection laid all waste, Sincerity towards th' heart-fearching God, Has made the new-born creature her abode, Nor shall be found in unregen'rate souls, Till the last fire burn all between the poles. Sincerity! Why 'tis his only pride; Weak and imperfect in all grace beside, He knows that God demands his heart entire, And gives him all his just demands require. Without it, his pretensions were as vain. As, having it, he deems the world's difdain; That great defect would cost him not alone Man's favourable judgment, but his own; His birthright shaken, and no longer clear, Than while his conduct proves his heart fincere. Retort the charge, and let the world be told She boafts a confidence she does not hold;

That, conscious of her crimes, she feels instead A cold misgiving, and a killing dread; That, while in health, the ground of her support Is madly to forget that life is short; That fick the trembles knowing the must die, Her hope prefumption, and her faith a lie; That while she dotes, and dreams that she believes, She mocks her Maker, and herfelf deceives, Her utmost reach, historical assent, The doctrines warpt to what they never meant; That truth itself is in her head as dull, And useless, as a candle in a scull, Since the and lego And all her love of God a groundless claim, A trick upon the canvass, painted flame. Tell her again, the fneer upon her face, And all her censures of the work of grace, Are infincere, meant only to conceal A dread she would not, yet is forc'd to feel; That in her heart the Christian she reveres, And while she seems to scorn him, only fears.

A poet does not work by fquare or line, As fmiths and joiners perfect a design; At least we moderns, our attention less, Beyond th' example of our fires, digrefs, And claim a right to scamper and run wide, Wherever chance, caprice, or fancy guide, The world and I fortuitoufly met; I ow'd a trifle, and have paid the debt; She did me wrong, I recompens'd the deed, And, having struck the balance, now proceed, Perhaps, however, as fome years have pass'd, Since she and I convers'd together last, And I have liv'd recluse in rural shades, Which feldom a diffinct report pervades, Great changes and new manners have occur'd, And blest reforms that I have never heard, And she may now be as discreet and wise, As once abfurd in all discerning eyes. Sobriety, perhaps, may now be found, Where once intoxication press'd the ground;

Th

Ar

Ch

Fo

It

H

T

A

L

A

A

T

V

,

7

The fubtle and injurious may be just were enived just I And he grown chafte that was the flave of luft; Arts once esteem'd may be with shame dismis'd; Charity may relax the mifer's fift; laton sale ovin in A The gamester may have cast his cards away, and you'll Forgot to curse, and only kneel to pray. It has indeed been told me (with what weight, How credibly, 'tis hard for me to state) That fables old, that feem'd for ever mute, wolf Reviv'd, are hast'ning into fresh repute, And gods and goddeffes discarded long, Like useless lumber, or a stroller's song, Are bringing into vogue their heathen train, And Jupiter bids fair to rule again; That certain feafts are instituted now, Where Venus hears the lover's tender vow; That all Olympus through the country roves, To confecrate our few remaining groves, And echo learns politely to repeat The praise of names for ages obsolete;

That having prov'd the weakness, it should feems Of revelation's ineffectual beam, To bring the passions under sober sway, And give the moral fprings their proper play, They mean to try what may at last be done, By flout fubstantial gods of wood and stone, And whether Roman rites may not produce The virtues of old Rome for English use. May fuch fuccess attend the pious plan, May Mercury once more embellish man, Grace him again with long forgotten arts, Reclaim his tafte and brighten up his parts, Make him athletic as in days of old, Learn'd at the bar, in the palæstra bold, Diveft the rougher fex of female airs, And teach the fofter not to copy their's: The change shall please, nor shall it matter aught Who works the wonder, if it be but wrought. 'Tis time, however, if the case stands thus, For us plain folks, and all who fide with us,

To

An

If

If Th

T

So

A

A M

Т

S

A

T

1

To build our altar, confident and bold, and to the world wall
And fay as stern Elijah said of old-
The strife now stands upon a fair award, the stand base
If Isr'el's Lord be God, then serve the Lord: 100 61
If he be filent, faith is all a whim, mos book wing batA
Then Baal is the God, and worship him.
Digression is so much in modern use, memod the roll
Thought is so rare, and fancy so profuse, and had
Some never feem fo wide of their intent, mobile ried ?
As when returning to the theme they meant;
As mendicants, whose business is to roam, and hard of
Make ev'ry parish, but their own, their home.
Though fuch continual zigzags in a book,
Such drunken reelings have an awkward look,
And I had rather creep to what is true,
Than rove and stagger with no mark in view;
Yet to consult a little, seem'd no crime,
The freakish humour of the present time:
But now to gather up what feems dispers'd,
And touch the subject I design'd at first,

H

P

N

T

S

W

T

Is

F

S

W

B

0

Ir

"

I

May prove, though much beside the rules of art, Best for the public, and my wisest part. And first, let no man charge me that I mean To clothe in fable every focial scene, and a forth And give good company a face fevere, and and and As if they met around a father's bier; For tell fome men, that pleasure all their bent, And laughter all their work, is life mispent, Their wisdom bursts into this sage reply, Then mirth is fin, and we should always cry. To find the medium asks some share of wit, And therefore 'tis a mark fools never hit. But though life's valley be a vale of tears, A brighter scene beyond that vale appears, Whose glory, with a light that never fades, and I bear Shoots between scatter'd rocks and op'ning shades, And, while it shows the land the foul defires, The language of the land she seeks, inspires. Thus touch'd, the tongue receives a facred cure Of all that was abfurd, profane, impure;

Held within modest bounds, the tide of speech Pursues the course that truth and nature teach; No longer labours merely to produce The pomp of found, or tinkle without use: Where'er it winds, the falutary stream, Sprightly and fresh, enriches ev'ry theme, While all the happy man posses'd before, The gift of nature, or the classic store, Is made fubservient to the grand design, For which heav'n form'd the faculty divine. So, should an idiot, while at large he strays, Find the fweet lyre on which an artist plays, With rash and awkward force the chords he shakes, And grins with wonder at the jar he makes; But let the wife and well-inftructed hand Once take the shell beneath his just command, In gentle founds it feems as it complain'd Of the rude injuries it late fustain'd, 'Till, tun'd at length to some immortal song, It founds Jehovah's name, and pours his praise along.

VOL. I.

RETIREMENT.

100 G & TAN A R. R. F 20 0 0

white who abmed dishare mid-

a bas aver tall street per sadrati

White or is a district the fall of the solichly at a feel a enticles grey theme,

the bift of auties, or the called thore,

spiribilians office may being whether

Or 1

And

He

Lay

Imp

And

Th

Th

An

Fo

Cal

Fre

Fre

So

W

Th

W

T

T

-studiis florens ignobilis otî.

VIRG. Geor. Lib. 4.

HACKNEY'D in business, wearied at that oar

Which thousands, once fast chain'd to, quit no more,

But which, when life at ebb runs weak and low,

All wish, or feem to wish, they could forego;

The statesman, lawyer, merchant, man of trade,

Pants for the refuge of some rural shade,

Where, all his long anxieties forgot

Amid the charms of a sequester'd spot,

4

Or recollected only to gild o'er And add a fmile to what was fweet before; He may posses the joys he thinks he sees, Lay his old age upon the lap of ease, to assol that add all Improve the remnant of his wasted span, And, having liv'd a trifler, die a man. Thus conscience pleads her cause within the breaft; Though long rebell'd against, not yet suppress'd, And calls a creature form'd for God alone, For heav'n's high purposes, and not his own; Calls him away from felfish ends and aims, From what debilitates and what inflames, From cities, humming with a reftless crowd, Sordid as active, ignorant as loud, Their fibres penere Whose highest praise is that they live in vain, The dupes of pleasure, or the slaves of gain, Where works of man are cluster'd close around, And works of God are hardly to be found, To regions where in spite of sin and woe, Traces of Eden are still feen below, Les phridae dine

W

To

TI

(II

T

T

C

W

T

M

H

T

T

T

1

0

Where mountain, river, forest, field, and grove. Remind him of his Maker's power and love. 'Tis well if, look'd for at fo late a day, In the last scene of such a senseless play, True wisdom will attend his feeble call, And grace his action ere the curtain fall. Souls that have long despis'd their heav'nly birth, Their wishes all impregnated with earth, For threescore years employ'd with ceaseless care In catching smoke and feeding upon air, Conversant only with the ways of men, Rarely redeem the short remaining ten. Invet'rate habits choke th' unfruitful heart, Their fibres penetrate its tend'rest part, And, draining its nutritious pow'rs to feed Their noxious growth, starve ev'ry better feed.

Happy, if full of days—but happier far,

If, ere we yet discern life's ev'ning star,

Sick of the service of a world that feeds

Its patient drudges with dry chaff and weeds,

We can escape from custom's idiot sway, To ferve the Sov'reign we were born t' obey. Then fweet to muse upon his skill display'd (Infinite skill) in all that he has made! To trace, in nature's most minute design, The fignature and stamp of pow'r divine, Contrivance intricate, express'd with ease, Where unaffifted fight no beauty fees, The shapely limb and lubricated joint, Within the small dimensions of a point, Muscle and nerve miraculously spun, His mighty work, who speaks and it is done, Th' invisible in things scarce seen reveal'd, To whom an atom is an ample field: To wonder at a thousand insect forms, These hatch'd, and those resuscitated worms, New life ordain'd and brighter scenes to share, Once prone on earth, now buoyant upon air, Whose shape would make them, had they bulk and size, More hideous foes than fancy can devise;

T

T

T

I

With helmet heads and dragon scales adorn'd, The mighty myriads, now fecurely fcorn'd, Would mock the majesty of man's high birth, Despise his bulwarks, and unpeople earth: Then with a glance of fancy to furvey, Far as the faculty can stretch away, Ten thousand rivers pour'd at his command From urns that never fail through every land; These like a deluge with impetuous force, Those winding modestly a filent course; The cloud-furmounting alps, the fruitful vales; Seas on which ev'ry nation spreads her fails; The fun, a world whence other worlds drink light; The crescent moon, the diadem of night; Stars countless, each in his appointed place, and of Fast-anchor'd in the deep abyss of space __ _ _ _ At fuch a fight to catch the poet's flame, And with a rapture like his own exclaim, These are thy glorious works, thou fource of good, How dimly feen, how faintly understood ! out if orold

This universal frame, thus wondrous fair;
Thy pow'r divine, and bounty beyond thought,
Ador'd and prais'd in all that thou hast wrought.
Absorb'd in that immensity I see,
I shrink abas'd, and yet aspire to thee;
Instruct me, guide me, to that heav'nly day
Thy words more clearly than thy works display,
That, while thy truths my grosser thoughts refine,
I may resemble thee and call thee mine.

Oh bleft proficiency! furpaffing all

That men erroneously their glory call,

The recompense that arts or arms can yield,

The bar, the senate, or the tented field.

Compar'd with this sublimest life below,

Ye kings and rulers, what have courts to show?

Thus studied, us'd and consecrated thus,

On earth what is, seems form'd indeed for us;

Not as the plaything of a froward child,

Fretful unless diverted and beguil'd,

To

Re

To

Ou

To

Fa

To

T

A

0

Bi

F

H

T

A

F

S

Much less to feed and fan the fatal fires Of pride, ambition, or impure defires, But as a scale by which the soul ascends From mighty means to more important ends, Securely, though by steps but rarely trod, Mounts from inferior beings up to God, And fees, by no fallacious light or dim, Earth made for man, and man himself for him. Not that I mean t'approve, or would enforce, A fuperstitious and monastic course: Truth is not local, God alike pervades And fills the world of traffic and the shades, And may be fear'd amidst the busiest scenes, Or fcorn'd where business never intervenes. But 'tis not eafy with a mind like our's, Conscious of weakness in its noblest pow'rs, And in a world where, other ills apart,

3

The roving eye misleads the careless heart,

To limit thought, by nature prone to ftray

Wherever freakish fancy points the way;

To bid the pleadings of felf-love be still, Refign our own and feek our Maker's will; To spread the page of scripture, and compare Our conduct with the laws engraven there; To measure all that passes in the breast, Faithfully, fairly, by that facred test; To dive into the fecret deeps within, To spare no passion and no fav'rite sin, And fearch the themes, important above all, Ourselves and our recov'ry from our fall. But leifure, filence, and a mind releas'd From anxious thoughts how wealth may be increas'd, How to fecure in fome propitious hour The point of int'rest or the post of pow'r, A foul ferene, and equally retir'd From objects too much dreaded or defir'd, Safe from the clamours of perverse dispute, At least are friendly to the great pursuit. Op'ning the map of God's extensive plan, We find a little isle, this life of man;

W

T

G

D

A

S

T

T

Ί

7

Eternity's unknown expanse appears Circling around and limiting his years. The bufy race examine, and explore Each creek and cavern of the dang'rous shore, With care collect what in their eyes excels, Some shining pebbles, and some weeds and shells; Thus laden, dream that they are rich and great, And happiest he that groans beneath his weight: The waves o'ertake them in their ferious play, And ev'ry hour fweeps multitudes away; They shriek and fink, survivors start and weep, Purfue their fport, and follow to the deep. A few forfake the throng; with lifted eyes Ask wealth of heav'n, and gain a real prize-Truth, wisdom, grace, and peace like that above, Seal'd with his fignet whom they ferve and love; Scorn'd by the rest, with patient hope they wait A kind release from their impersect state, And, unregretted, are foon fnatch'd away From scenes of sorrow into glorious day.

Nor these alone prefer a life recluse, Who feek retirement for its proper use; The love of change that lives in ev'ry breaft, Genius, and temper, and defire of reft, Discordant motives in one centre meet, And each inclines its vot'ry to retreat. Some minds by nature are averse to noise, And hate the tumult half the world enjoys, The lure of av'rice, or the pompous prize That courts display before ambitious eyes; The fruits that hang on pleafure's flow'ry ftem, Whate'er enchants them, are no fnares to them. To them the deep recess of dusky groves, Or forest where the deer securely roves, " and and all The fall of waters, and the fong of birds, And hills that echo to the diftant herds, Are luxuries excelling all the glare The world can boaft, and her chief fav'rites share. With eager step, and carelessly array'd, bnA For fuch a cause the poet seeks the shade,

From all he fees he catches new delight, Pleas'd fancy claps her pinions at the fight, The rifing or the fetting orb of day, The clouds that flit, or flowly float away, Nature in all the various shapes she wears, .. Frowning in storms, or breathing gentle airs, The fnowy robe her wintry state assumes, Her fummer heats, her fruits, and her perfumes-All, all alike transport the glowing bard, Success in rhyme his glory and reward. Oh nature! whose Elysian scenes disclose His bright perfections at whose word they rose, Next to that Pow'r who form'd thee and fustains, Be thou the great inspirer of my strains. Still, as I touch the lyre, do thou expand Thy genuine charms, and guide an artless hand, That I may catch a fire but rarely known, Give useful light though I should miss renown, And, poring on thy page, whose ev'ry line Bears proof of an intelligence divine,

Ma

Th

Gli

WI

Hi

In

Re

Or

Te Sai

Th

T

An

In

An

Ac

W

May feel an heart enrich'd by what it pays,

That builds its glory on its Maker's praife.

Woe to the man whose wit disclaims its use,

Glitt'ring in vain, or only to seduce,

Who studies nature with a wanton eye,

Admires the work, but slips the lesson by;

His hours of leisure and recess employs,

In drawing pictures of forbidden joys,

Retires to blazon his own worthless name,

Or shoot the careless with a surer aim.

The lover too shuns business and alarms,

Tender idolater of absent charms.

Saints offer nothing in their warmest pray'rs,

That he devotes not with a zeal like their's;

'Tis consecration of his heart, soul, time,

And ev'ry thought that wanders, is a crime.

In sights he worships his supremely fair,

And weeps a sad libation in despair,

Adores a creature, and, devout in vain,

Wins in return an answer of distain.

As woodbine weds the plant within her reach, Rough elm, or fmooth-grain'd ash, or glossy beech, In fpiral rings afcends the trunk, and lays Her golden taffels on the leafy fprays, But does a mischief while she lends a grace, Strait'ning its growth by fuch a strict embrace-So love, that clings around the noblest minds, Forbids th' advancement of the foul he binds; The fuitor's air indeed he foon improves, And forms it to the taste of her he loves, Teaches his eyes a language, and no less Refines his speech and fashions his address: But farewell promises of happier fruits, Manly defigns, and learning's grave pursuits; Girt with a chain he cannot wish to break, His only bliss is forrow for her sake; Who will may pant for glory and excel, Her smile his aim, all higher aims farewell! Thyrsis, Alexis, or whatever name May least offend against so pure a flame,

Thou

And

Can Yet

The

Rifq

Tind

Pafto

Uml

Swee

Soft

Are

Conf

Soot

And

Up-

Not

Call

Poir

Though fage advice of friends the most fincere Sounds harshly in so delicate an ear, And lovers of all creatures, tame or wild, Can leaft brook management, however mild, Yet let a poet (poetry difarms The fiercest animals with magic charms) Risque an intrusion on thy pensive mood, And woo and win thee to thy proper good. Pastoral images and still retreats, of the endigma and Umbrageous walks and folitary feats, Sweet birds in concert with harmonious streams, Soft airs, nocturnal vigils, and day dreams, Are all enchantments in a case like thine, Conspire against thy peace with one design, Sooth thee to make thee but a furer prey, And feed the fire that wastes thy pow'rs away. Up—God has form'd thee with a wifer view, Not to be led in chains, but to fubdue, Calls thee to cope with enemies, and first Points out a conflict with thyfelf, the worst.

Woman indeed, a gift he would bestow
When he design'd a paradise below,
The richest earthly boon his hands afford,
Deserves to be belov'd, but not ador'd.
Post away swiftly to more active scenes,
Collect the scatter'd truths that study gleans,
Mix with the world, but with its wiser part,
No longer give an image all thine heart;
Its empire is not her's, nor is it thine,
'Tis God's just claim, prerogative divine.

Virtuous and faithful Heberden! whose skill
Attempts no task it cannot well fulfil,
Gives melancholy up to nature's care,
And sends the patient into purer air.
Look where he comes—in this embow'r'd alcove—
Stand close conceal'd, and see a statue move:
Lips busy, and eyes fixt, foot falling slow,
Arms hanging idly down, hands class'd below,
Interpret to the marking eye distress,
Such as its symptoms can alone express.

Thi

Cor

Or

Rer

Its

Bot

And

Th

Til

Till

Pie

Thi

Cla

Job

And

And

Frie

Blef

--

Ker

1

That tongue is filent now; that filent tongue Could argue once, could jest or join the fong, Could give advice, could censure or commend, Or charm the forrows of a drooping friend. Renounc'd alike its office and its sport, Its brifker and its graver strains fall short; Both fail beneath a fever's fecret sway, And, like a summer-brook, are past away. This is a fight for pity to peruse Till the refemble faintly what the views, Till fympathy contract a kindred pain, Pierc'd with the woes that the laments in vain. This, of all maladies that man infelt, Claims most compassion, and receives the least: Job felt it, when he groan'd beneath the rod And the barb'd arrows of a frowning God; And fuch emollients as his friends could spare, Friends fuch as his for modern Jobs prepare. Bleft, rather curft, with hearts that never feel, Kept fnug in caskets of close-hammer'd steel, VOL. I.

With mouths made only to grin wide and eat, And minds that deem derided pain a treat, With limbs of British oak, and nerves of wire, And wit that puppet-prompters might inspire, Their fov'reign nostrum is a clumfy joke, On pangs enforc'd with God's severest stroke. But, with a foul that ever felt the fting Of forrow, forrow is a facred thing: Not to molest, or irritate, or raise A laugh at his expence, is stender praise; He that has not usurp'd the name of man Does all, and deems too little all, he can, T' affuage the throbbings of the fester'd part, And staunch the bleedings of a broken heart. 'Tis not, as heads that never ache suppose, Forg'ry of fancy, and a dream of woes; Man is an harp whose chords elude the fight, Each yielding harmony dispos'd aright; The screws revers'd (a task which if he please God in a moment executes with ease),

Te

Th

As

No

Par

No

No

An

Car

Th

No

No

And

Tha

Imp

AI

To

The

Ten thousand thousand strings at once go loose, Loft, till he tune them, all their power and use, Then neither heathy wilds, nor scenes as fair As ever recompens'd the peafant's care, Nor foft declivities with tufted hills. Nor view of waters turning busy mills, Parks in which art preceptress nature weds, Nor gardens interspers'd with flow'ry beds, Nor gales that catch the fcent of blooming groves, And waft it to the mourner as he roves, Can call up life into his faded eye, That passes all he sees unheeded by: No wounds like those a wounded spirit feels, No cure for fuch, till God who makes them, heals, And thou, fad fuff'rer under nameless ill, That yields not to the touch of human skill, Improve the kind occasion, understand A Father's frown, and kiss his chast'ning hand: To thee the day-spring, and the blaze of noon, The purple ev'ning and resplendent moon,

Re

T

Y

W

H

T

A

C

N

W

W

H

R

N

Bı

A

T

T

F

A

The stars that, sprinkled o'er the vault of night, Seem drops descending in a show'r of light, Shine not, or undefir'd and hated shine, Seen through the medium of a cloud like thine: Yet feek him, in his favour life is found, All blifs befide—a shadow or a found: Then heav'n, eclips'd fo long, and this dull earth, Shall feem to ftart into a fecond birth; Nature, assuming a more lovely face, Borrowing a beauty from the works of grace, Shall be despis'd and overlook'd no more, Shall fill thee with delights unfelt before, Impart to things inanimate a voice, And bid her mountains and her hills rejoice; The found shall run along the winding vales, And thou enjoy an Eden ere it fails.

Ye groves (the statesman at his desk exclaims, Sick of a thousand disappointed aims), My patrimonial treasure and my pride, Beneath your shades your gray possessor hide,

Receive me languishing for that repose The fervant of the public never knows. Ye faw me once (ah, those regretted days When boyish innocence was all my praise!) Hour after hour delightfully allot To studies then familiar, fince forgot, And cultivate a tafte for ancient fong, Catching its ardour as I mus'd along; Nor feldom, as propitious heav'n might fend, What once I valued and could boaft, a friend, Were witnesses how cordially I press'd His undiffembling virtue to my breaft; Receive me now, not uncorrupt as then, Nor guiltless of corrupting other men, But vers'd in arts that, while they feem to flay A falling empire, haften its decay. To the fair haven of my native home, The wreck of what I was, fatigu'd, I come; For once I can approve the patriot's voice, And make the course he recommends my choice;

F

We meet at last in one sincere desire, His wish and mine both prompt me to retire. 'Tis done-he steps into the welcome chaife, Lolls at his eafe behind four handsome bays, That whirl away from business and debate The difincumber'd Atlas of the state. Ask not the boy, who when the breeze of morn First shakes the glitt'ring drops from every thorn Unfolds his flock, then under bank or bush Sits linking cherry-stones or platting rush, How fair is freedom?—he was always free: To carve his ruftic name upon a tree, To fnare the mole, or with ill-fashion'd hook To draw th' incautious minnow from the brook, Are life's prime pleasures in his simple view, His flock the chief concern he ever knew-She shines but little in his heedless eyes, The good we never miss we rarely prize: But ask the noble drudge in state affairs, Escap'd from office and its constant cares,

What charms he fees in freedom's fmile express'd, In freedom loft fo long, now repoffers'd; The tongue whose strains were cogent as commands, Rever'd at home, and felt in foreign lands, Shall own itself a stamm'rer in that cause, Or plead its filence as its best applause. He knows indeed that, whether dress'd or rude, Wild without art, or artfully fubdu'd, Nature in ev'ry form inspires delight, But never mark'd her with fo just a fight. Her hedge-row shrubs, a variegated store, With woodbine and wild roses mantled o'er, Green balks and furrow'd lands, the stream that spreads Its cooling vapour o'er the dewy meads, Downs that almost escape th' inquiring eye, That melt and fade into the diftant fky, Beauties he lately flighted as he pass'd, Seem all created fince he travell'd laft. Master of all th' enjoyments he design'd, No rough annoyance rankling in his mind,

What early philosophic hours he keeps, How regular his meals, how found he fleeps! Not founder he that on the mainmast head, While morning kindles with a windy red, Begins a long look-out for diftant land, Nor quits, till ev'ning-watch, his giddy stand, Then fwift descending with a seaman's haste, Slips to his hammoc, and forgets the blaft, He chooses company, but not the squire's, Whose wit is rudeness, whose good breeding tires; Nor yet the parson's, who would gladly come, Obsequious when abroad, though proud at home; Nor can he much affect the neighb'ring peer, Whose toe of emulation treads too near; But wifely feeks a more convenient friend, With whom, difmissing forms, he may unbend! A man whom marks of condescending grace Teach, while they flatter him, his proper place; Who comes when call'd, and at a word withdraws, Speaks with referve, and liftens with applause;

Son

On

And

Ma

Bu

Or

Ye

W

Son

Bu

No

Th

T

Or

H

T

To

.

Se

Some plain mechanic, who, without pretence To birth or wit, nor gives nor takes offence; On whom he refts well-pleas'd his weary pow'rs, And talks and laughs away his vacant hours. The tide of life, fwift always in its course, May run in cities with a brifker force, But no where with a current fo ferene, Or half fo clear, as in the rural fcene. Yet how fallacious is all earthly blifs, What obvious truths the wifest heads may miss; Some pleasures live a month, and some a year, But short the date of all we gather here; No happiness is felt, except the true, That does not charm thee more for being new. This observation, as it chanc'd, not made, Or if the thought occurr'd, not duly weigh'd, He fighs-for, after all, by flow degrees, The fpot he lov'd has lost the pow'r to please; To cross his ambling pony day by day, Seems at the best but dreaming life away;

'Ti

Th

Af

Yo

Th

Lik

Th

For

Bu

Fre

Du

An

A

Th

An

W

Ar

In

Is

As

The prospect, such as might enchant despair, He views it not, or fees no beauty there; With aching heart, and discontented looks, Returns at noon to billiards or to books, But feels, while grasping at his faded joys, A fecret thirst of his renounc'd employs. He chides the tardiness of ev'ry post, Pants to be told of battles won or loft, Blames his own indolence, observes, though late, 'Tis criminal to leave a finking state, Flies to the levee, and, receiv'd with grace, Kneels, kisses hands, and shines again in place. Suburban villas, highway-side retreats, That dread the encroachment of our growing streets, Tight boxes, neatly fash'd, and in a blaze With all a July fun's collected rays, Delight the citizen, who, gasping there, Breathes clouds of dust, and calls it country air. Oh fweet retirement, who would balk the thought, That could afford retirement, or could not?

'Tis fuch an easy walk, so smooth and straight, The fecond milestone fronts the garden gate; A step if fair, and, if a shower approach, You find fafe shelter in the next stage-coach. There, prison'd in a parlour snug and small, Like bottled wasps upon a southern wall, The man of bus'ness and his friends compress'd, Forget their labours, and yet find no reft; But still 'tis rural-trees are to be feen From ev'ry window, and the fields are green; Ducks paddle in the pond before the door, And what could a remoter scene show more? A sense of elegance we rarely find The portion of a mean or vulgar mind, And ignorance of better things makes man, Who cannot much, rejoice in what he can; And he that deems his leifure well beftow'd In contemplation of a turnpike road, Is occupied as well, employs his hours As wifely, and as much improves his pow'rs,

Va

Th

Cu

Th

Al

TI

'T

T

N

N

V

N

0

(

F

F

7

As he that sumbers in pavilions grac'd
With all the charms of an accomplish'd taste.
Yet hence, alas! insolvencies; and hence
The unpitied victim of ill-judg'd expence,
From all his wearisome engagements freed,
Shakes hands with business, and retires indeed.

Your prudent grand-mammas, ye modern belles,
Content with Bristol, Bath, and Tunbridge-wells,
When health requir'd it would consent to roam,
Else more attach'd to pleasures found at home.
But now alike, gay widow, virgin, wise,
Ingenious to diversify dull life,
In coaches, chaises, caravans, and hoys,
Fly to the coast for daily, nightly joys,
And all, impatient of dry land, agree,
With one consent, to rush into the sea.—
Ocean exhibits, sathomless and broad,
Much of the power and majesty of God.
He swathes about the swelling of the deep,
That shines and rests, as infants smile and sleep;

Vast as it is, it answers as it flows The breathings of the lightest air that blows; Curling and whit'ning over all the wafte, The rifing waves obey th' increafing blaft, Abrupt and horrid as the tempest roars, Thunder and flash upon the stedfast shores, 'Till he that rides the whirlwind checks the rein, Then, all the world of waters fleeps again,— Nereids or Dryads, as the fashion leads, Now in the floods, now panting in the meads, Vot'ries of pleafure still, where'er she dwells, Near barren rocks, in palaces, or cells, Oh grant a poet leave to recommend (A poet fond of nature, and your friend) Her flighted works to your admiring view; Her works must needs excel, who fashion'd you. Would ye, when rambling in your morning ride, With fome unmeaning coxcomb at your side, Condemn the prattler for his idle pains, To waste unheard the music of his strains,

Th

Ar

An

W

He

M

Ip

Li

Ar

TI

W

Ja

T

A

By

M

T

Ja

H

And, deaf to all th' impertinence of tongue,
That, while it courts, affronts and does you wrong.
Mark well the finish'd plan without a fault,
The seas globose and huge, th' o'erarching vault,
Earth's millions daily fed, a world employ'd
In gath'ring plenty yet to be enjoy'd,
'Till gratitude grew vocal in the praise
Of God, beneficent in all his ways;
Grac'd with such wisdom, how would beauty shine!
Ye want but that to seem indeed divine.

Anticipated rents, and bills unpaid,

Force many a shining youth into the shade,

Not to redeem his time, but his estate,

And play the sool, but at a cheaper rate.

There, hid in loath'd obscurity, remov'd

From pleasures lest, but never more belov'd,

He just endures, and with a sickly spleen

Sighs o'er the beauties of the charming scene.

Nature indeed looks prettily in rhime;

Streams tinkle sweetly in poetic chime;

The warblings of the blackbird, clear and strong,
Are musical enough in Thomson's song;
And Cobham's groves, and Windsor's green retreats,
When Pope describes them, have a thousand sweets;
He likes the country, but in truth must own,
Most likes it, when he studies it in town.

Poor Jack—no matter who—for when I blame
I pity, and must therefore sink the name,
Liv'd in his saddle, lov'd the chase, the course,
And always, ere he mounted, kiss'd his horse.
Th' estate his sires had own'd in ancient years
Was quickly distanc'd, match'd against a peer's.
Jack vanish'd, was regretted and forgot;
'Tis wild good-nature's never failing lot.
At length, when all had long suppos'd him dead,
By cold submersion, razor, rope, or lead,
My lord, alighting at his usual place,
The Crown, took notice of an oftler's face.
Jack knew his friend, but hop'd in that disguise
He might escape the most observing eyes,

And whiftling, as if unconcern'd and gay,
Curried his nag, and look'd another way.
Convinc'd at last, upon a nearer view,
'Twas he, the same, the very Jack he knew,
O'erwhelm'd at once with wonder, grief, and joy,
He press'd him much to quit his base employ;
His countenance, his purse, his heart, his hand,
Inst'ence and pow'r, were all at his command:
Peers are not always gen'rous as well-bred,
But Granby was, meant truly what he said.
Jack bow'd, and was oblig'd—confess'd 'twas strange
That so retir'd he should not wish a change,
But knew no medium between guzzling beer,
And his old stint—three thousand pounds a year.

Thus fome retire to nourish hopeless woe;

Some seeking happiness not found below;

Some to comply with humour, and a mind

To social scenes by nature disinclin'd;

Some sway'd by fashion, some by deep disgust;

Some self impov'rish'd, and because they must;

Bu

Fo

Gi

An

A

Fu Bu

Hi

He

Hi

'T

Bu

At

A

Th

Ar

Ex

But few that court Retirement are aware Of half the toils they most encounter there.

Lucrative offices are seldom lost For want of pow'rs proportion'd to the post: Give ev'n a dunce th' employment he desires, And he foon finds the talents it requires; A business with an income at his heels Furnishes always oil for its own wheels. But in his arduous enterprise to close His active years with indolent repose, He finds the labours of that flate exceed His utmost faculties, severe indeed. 'Tis easy to resign a toilsome place, But not to manage leifure with a grace; Absence of occupation is not rest, A mind quite vacant is a mind diffres'd. The vet'ran fleed, excus'd his task at length, In kind compassion of his failing strength, And turn'd into the park or mead to graze, Exempt from future service all his days, VOL. I.

There feels a pleasure perfect in its kind, Ranges at liberty, and fnuffs the wind: But when his lord would quit the busy road, To taste a joy like that he has bestow'd, He proves less happy than his favour'd brute, A life of ease a difficult pursuit. Thought, to the man that never thinks, may feem As natural as, when afleep, to dream; But reveries (for human minds will act) Specious in show, impossible in fact, Those sliminy webs that break as foon as wrought, Attain not to the dignity of thought: Nor yet the fwarms that occupy the brain, Where dreams of dress, intrigue, and pleasure reign; Nor fuch as ufeless conversation breeds, Or lust engenders, and indulgence feeds. Whence, and what are we? to what end ordain'd? What means the drama by the world fuftain'd? Business or vain amusement, care or mirth, Divide the frail inhabitants of earth.

Is d

Is t

Cau

Ma

The

And

Wh

The

And

Par

To

The

And

Enr

Yet

An

Is duty a mere fport, or an employ? Life an intrusted talent, or a toy? Is there, as reason, conscience, scripture, say, Cause to provide for a great future day, When, earth's affign'd duration at an end, Man shall be summon'd and the dead attend? The trumpet-will it found? the curtain rise? And show th' august tribunal of the skies, Where no prevarication shall avail, Where eloquence and artifice shall fail, The pride of arrogant distinctions fall, And conscience and our conduct judge us all? Pardon me, ye that give the midnight oil To learned cares or philosophic toil, Though I revere your honourable names, Your useful labours and important aims, And hold the world indebted to your aid, Enrich'd with the discoveries ye have made; Yet let me stand excus'd, if I esteem A mind employ'd on fo fublime a theme,

Pushing her bold inquiry to the date

And outline of the present transient state,

And, after poising her advent'rous wings,

Settling at last upon eternal things,

Far more intelligent, and better taught

The strenuous use of profitable thought,

Than ye, when happiest, and enlighten'd most,

And highest in renown, can justly boast.

A mind unnerv'd, or indispos'd to bear
The weight of subjects worthiest of her care,
Whatever hopes a change of scene inspires,
Must change her nature, or in vain retires.
An idler is a watch that wants both hands,
As useless if it goes as when it stands.
Books therefore, not the scandal of the shelves,
In which lewd sensualists print out themselves;
Nor those in which the stage gives vice a blow,
With what success let modern manners show;
Nor his who, for the bane of thousands born,
Built God a church, and laugh'd his word to scorn,

Skilf

Nor

A pa

To

But

The

And

Stro

All

Wo

Beh

Am

Lux

And

Hal

Bec

'Til

Tic

Skilful alike to feem devout and just, And stab religion with a fly side-thrust; Nor those of learn'd philologists, who chase A panting fyllable through time and fpace, Start it at home, and hunt it in the dark, To Gaul, to Greece, and into Noah's ark; But fuch as learning without false pretence, The friend of truth, th' affociate of found fense, And fuch as in the zeal of good delign, Strong judgment lab'ring in the scripture mine, All fuch as manly and great fouls produce, Worthy to live, and of eternal use: Behold in these what leisure hours demand, Amusement and true knowledge hand in hand. Luxury gives the mind a childish cast, And while she polishes, perverts the taste; Habits of close attention, thinking heads, Become more rare as diffipation spreads, 'Till authors hear at length, one gen'ral cry, Tickle and entertain us, or we die.

The loud demand, from year to year the fame, Beggars invention and makes fancy lame, 'Till farce itself, most mournfully jejune, Calls for the kind affiftance of a tune; And novels (witness ev'ry month's review) Belie their name, and offer nothing new. The mind, relaxing into needful sport, Should turn to writers of an abler fort, Whose wit well manag'd, and whose classic style, Give truth a lustre, and make wisdom smile. Friends (for I cannot stint, as some have done, Too rigid in my view, that name to one; Though one, I grant it, in the gen'rous breaft Will stand advanc'd a step above the rest: Flow'rs by that name promiscuously we call, But one, the rose, the regent of them all)-Friends, not adopted with a school-boy's haste, But chosen with a nice discerning taste, Well-born, well-disciplin'd, who, plac'd apart From vulgar minds, have honour much at heart, And

Suc

A to

As

For

See

Af

W

I p

Ho

But

-40

W

Ye

Th

Ca

Or

Di

Or

And, tho' the world may think th' ingredients odd, The love of virtue, and the fear of God! Such friends prevent what elfe wou'd foon fucceed, A temper ruftic as the life we lead, And keep the polish of the manners clean, As their's who buftle in the bufieft scene; For folitude, however fome may rave, Seeming a fanctuary, proves a grave, A fepulchre in which the living lie, Where all good qualities grow fick and die. I praise the Frenchman , his remark was shrewd-How fweet, how passing sweet, is solitude! But grant me still a friend in my retreat, Whom I may whifper-folitude is fweet. Yet neither these delights, nor aught beside That appetite can ask, or wealth provide, Can fave us always from a tedious day, Or shine the dulness of still life away; Divine communion, carefully enjoy'd, Or fought with energy, must fill the void,

T

T

H

H

N

N

7

S

H

T

A

R

7

Oh facred art, to which alone life owes Its happiest seasons, and a peaceful close, Scorn'd in a world, indebted to that fcorn For evils daily felt and hardly born, Not knowing thee, we reap, with bleeding hands, Flow'rs of rank odour upon thorny lands, And, while experience cautions us in vain, Grasp seeming happiness, and find it pain. Despondence, self-deserted in her grief, Loft by abandoning her own relief, Murmuring and ungrateful discontent, That scorns afflictions mercifully meant, Those humours tart as wines upon the fret, Which idleness and weariness beget; These, and a thousand plagues that haunt the breast, Fond of the phantom of an earthly reft, Divine communion chases, as the day Drives to their dens th' obedient beafts of prey. See Judah's promis'd king, bereft of all, Driv'n out an exile from the face of Saul,

To distant caves the lonely wand'rer slies,

Tot seek that peace a tyrant's frown denies.

Hear the sweet accents of his tuneful voice,

Hear him, o'erwhelm'd with forrow, yet rejoice;

No womanish or wailing grief has part,

No, not a moment, in his royal heart;

'Tis manly music, such as martyrs make,

Suff'ring with gladness for a Saviour's sake;

His soul exults, hope animates his lays,

The sense of mercy kindles into praise,

And wilds, samiliar with the lion's roar,

Ring with ecstatic sounds unheard before:

'Tis love like his that can alone descat

The soes of man, or make a desert sweet.

Religion does not censure or exclude
Unnumber'd pleasures harmlessly pursu'd;
To study culture, and with artful toil
To meliorate and tame the stubborn soil;
To give dissimilar yet fruitful lands
The grain, or herb, or plant, that each demands;

To cherish virtue in an humble state,

And share the joys your bounty may create;

To mark the matchless workings of the pow'r

That shuts within its seed the suture slow'r,

Bid these in elegance of form excel,

In colour these, and those delight the smell,

Sends nature forth the daughter of the skies,

To dance on earth, and charm all human eyes;

To teach the canvass innocent deceit,

Or lay the landscape on the snowy sheet—

These, these are arts pursu'd without a crime,

That leave no stain upon the wing of time.

Me poetry (or, rather, notes that aim

F

Me poetry (or, rather, notes that aim
Feebly and vainly at poetic fame)
Employs, shut out from more important views,
Fast by the banks of the slow winding Ouse;
Content is, thus sequester'd, I may raise
A monitor's, though not a poet's praise,
And while I teach an art too little known,
To close life wisely, may not waste my own.

THE DOVES.

I.

REAS'NING at every step he treads,

Man yet mistakes his way,

While meaner things, whom instinct leads,

Are rarely known to stray.

II.

One filent eve I wander'd late,

And heard the voice of love;

The turtle thus address'd her mate,

And sooth'd the list'ning dove—

III. ·

Our mutual bond of faith and truth,

No time shall disengage;

Those blessings of our early youth,

Shall cheer our latest age:

· IV.

While innocence without disguise,
And constancy sincere,
Shall fill the circles of those eyes,
And mine can read them there;

V.

Those ills that wait on all below
Shall ne'er be felt by me,
Or, gently felt, and only so,
As being shar'd with thee.

VI.

When lightnings flash among the trees,
Or kites are hov'ring near,
I fear lest thee alone they seize,
And know no other fear.

VII.

'Tis then I feel myself a wife,
And press thy wedded side,
Resolv'd an union form'd for life
Death never shall divide,

VII.

But, oh! if, fickle and unchaste,

(Forgive a transient thought)

Thou could become unkind at last,

And fcorn thy present lot,

IX.

No need of lightnings from on high,
Or kites with cruel beak;
Denied th' endearments of thine eye,
This widow'd heart would break.

X.

Thus fang the sweet sequester'd bird
Soft as the passing wind,
And I recorded what I heard—

A lesson for mankind.

A FABLE.

A RAVEN, while with gloffy breaft Her new-laid eggs she fondly pres'd, And on her wicker-work high mounted He chickens prematurely counted, (A fault philosophers might blame If quite exempted from the fame) Enjoy'd at ease the genial day; 'Twas April as the bumkins fay, The legislature call'd it May. But fuddenly a wind as high As ever fwept a winter fky Shook the young leaves about her ears, And fill'd her with a thousand fears, Left the rude blaft fhould fnap the bough, And fpread her golden hopes below. But just at eve the blowing weather, And all her fears, were hush'd together: And now, queth poor unthinking Ralph, 'Tis over, and the brood is fafe;

(For Ravens, though, as birds of omen,
They teach both conj'rers and old women
To tell us what is to befall,
Can't prophefy themselves at all.)
The morning came, when neighbour Hodge,
Who long had mark'd her airy lodge,
And destin'd all the treasure there
A gift to his expecting fair,
Climb'd like a squirrel to his dray,
And bore the worthless prize away.

MORAL.

'Tis Providence alone secures,
In every change, both mine and your's:
Safety consists not in escape
From dangers of a frightful shape;
An earthquake may be bid to spare
The man that's strangled by a hair.
Fate steals along with silent tread,
Found oft'nest in what least we dread,
Frowns in the storm with angry brow,
But in the sunshine strikes the blow.

A COMPARISON.

Sil

Fa

W

Int

Gr

Ble

Pu

Ar

SU

Fr

Oh

Be

The lapse of time and rivers is the same;

Both speed their journey with a restless stream;

The silent pace with which they steal away

No wealth can bribe, no pray'rs persuade to stay;

Alike irrevocable both when past,

And a wide ocean swallows both at last.

Though each resemble each in ev'ry part,

A difference strikes at length the musing heart;

Streams never slow in vain; where streams abound,

How laughs the land with various plenty crown'd!

But time that should enrich the nobler mind,

Neglected, leaves a dreary waste behind.

ANOTHER.

ADDRESSED TO A YOUNG LADY.

Sweet stream that winds through yonder glade,
Apt emblem of a virtuous maid—

Silent and chafte she steals along, Far from the world's gay bufy throng, With gentle, yet prevailing, force, mamual to two min I Intent upon her destin'd course; of von dian flutte I Graceful and useful all the does, to all and read reserved Bleffing and bleft where'er the goes, we sale to traff I Pure-bosom'd as that wat'ry glass, and affect on I And heav'n reflected in her face.

VERSES

They are to unaconducated

SUPPOSED TO BE WRITTEN BY ALEXANDER SELKIRK, DURING HIS SOLITARY ABODE IN THE ISLAND OF JUAN FERNANDEZ.

Society, friendigue, and I AM monarch of all I furvey, My right there is none to dispute; From the centre all round to the fea, I am lord of the fowl and the brute. Oh, folitude! where are the charms That fages have feen in thy face? Better dwell in the midst of alarms, Than reign in this horrible place.

TH. BILKIRK

Fac (1992), the world's gay AI (y three)

Silear and sharke for Feat along,

Reli

Mo

But

Ne'

Ye

Son

My

O to

C

A

T

R

O

T

C

I am out of humanity's reach,

I must finish my journey alone,

Never hear the sweet music of speech;

I start at the sound of my own.

The beasts, that roam over the plain,

My form with indifference see;

They are so unacquainted with man,

Their tameness is shocking to me.

III.

Society, friendship, and love,
Divinely bestow'd upon man,
Oh, had I the wings of a dove,
How soon would I taste you again!
My forrows I then might assuage
In the ways of religion and truth,
Might learn from the wisdom of age,
And be cheer'd by the sallies of youth.

IV.

Religion! what treasure untold
Resides in that heavenly word!

More precious than silver and gold,
Or all that this earth can afford.

But the sound of the church-going bell
These vallies and rocks never heard,
Ne'er sigh'd at the sound of a knell,
Or smil'd when a sabbath appear'd.

V.

Ye winds, that have made me your sport,

Convey to this desolate shore

Some cordial endearing report

Of a land I shall visit no more.

My friends, do they now and then send

A wish or a thought after me?

O tell me I yet have a friend,

Though a friend I am never to see.

PR

TO

Ro

Fai

See

An

Di

TI

T

VI.

How fleet is a glance of the mind!

Compar'd with the speed of its flight,

The tempest itself lags behind,

And the swift winged arrows of light.

When I think of my own native land,

In a moment I seem to be there;

But alas! recollection at hand

Soon hurries me back to despair.

VII.

But the sea-sowl is gone to her nest,

The beast is laid down in his lair,

Ev'n here is a season of rest,

And I to my cabin repair.

There's mercy in every place;

And mercy, encouraging thought!

Gives even affliction a grace,

And reconciles man to his lot.

ON THE

PROMOTION OF EDWARD THURLOW, ESQ.
TO THE LORD HIGH CHANCELLORSHIP OF ENGLAND.

I.

Round Thurlow's head, in early youth, And in his sportive days,

Fair science pour'd the light of truth, And genius shed his rays,

II.

See! with united wonder, cried Th' experienc'd and the fage,

Ambition in a boy supplied With all the skill of age!

III.

Discernment, eloquence, and grace, Proclaim him born to sway

The balance in the highest place,

And bear the palm away.

IV.

The praise bestow'd was just and wise;

He sprang impetuous forth,

Secure of conquest where the prize

Attends superior worth.

Th

T

T

T

F

So the best courser on the plain

Ere yet he starts is known,

And does but at the goal obtain

What all had deem'd his own.

ODE TO PEACE.

I.

Come, peace of mind, delightful guest,
Return and make thy downy nest
Once more in this sad heart!
Nor riches I, nor pow'r, pursue,
Nor hold forbidden joys in view;
We therefore need not part.

II.

Where wilt thou dwell, if not with me,

From av'rice and ambition free,

And pleasure's fatal wiles?

For whom, alas! dost thou prepare

The sweets that I was wont to share,

The banquet of thy smiles?

Low wood enil

III.

The great, the gay, shall they partake
The heav'n that thou alone canst make?
And wilt thou quit the stream
That murmurs through the dewy mead,
The grove and the sequester'd shed,
To be a guest with them?

IV.

For thee I panted, thee I priz'd,

For thee I gladly facrific'd

Whate'er I lov'd before;

And shall I see thee start away,

And, helpless, hopeless, hear thee say—

Farewell! we meet no more?

HUMAN FRAILTY.

I.

Weak and irresolute is man;
The purpose of to-day,
Woven with pains into his plan,
To-morrow rends away.

II.

B

The bow well bent, and finart the foring, Vice feems already slain;

But passion rudely snaps the string, And it revives again.

III.

Some foe to his upright intent Finds out his weaker part; Virtue engages his affent, But pleasure wins his heart.

IV.

Tis here the folly of the wife
Through all his art we view;
And, while his tongue the charge denies,
His conscience owns it true.

V

Bound on a voyage of awful length
And dangers little known,
A stranger to superior strength,
Man vainly trusts his own.

VI.

But oars alone can ne'er prevail

To reach the distant coast,

The breath of heav'n must swell the fail,

Or all the toil is lost.

THE MODERN PATRIOT.

T

REBELLION is my theme all day;
I only wish 'twould come

(As who knows but perhaps it may?)
A little nearer home.

II.

Yon roaring boys, who rave and fight
On t'other fide th' atlantic,
I always held them in the right,
But most so when most frantic.

III.

When lawless mobs infult the court,

That man shall be my toast,

If breaking windows be the sport,

Who bravely breaks the most.

IV.

Ir

T

T

I

But oh! for him my fancy culls

The choicest flow'rs she bears,

Who constitutionally pulls

Your house about your ears.

V.

Such civil broils are my delight;

Tho' fome folks can't endure 'em,

Who fay the mob are mad outright,

And that a rope must cure 'em,

VI.

A rope! I wish we patriots had

Such strings for all who need 'em—

What! hang a man for going mad?

Then farewell British freedom.

ON OBSERVING SOME NAMES OF LITTLE NOTE RECORDED IN THE BIOGRAPHIA BRITANNICA,

Oн, fond attempt to give a deathless lot.

To names ignoble, born to be forgot!

In vain, recorded in historic page,

They court the notice of a future age:

Those twinkling tiny lustres of the land

Drop one by one from Fame's neglecting hand;

Lethæan gulphs receive them as they fall,

And dark oblivion soon absorbs them all.

So when a child, as playful children use,

Has burnt to tinder a stale last year's news,

The slame extinct, he views the roving fire—

There goes my lady, and there goes the squire,

There goes the parson, oh! illustrious spark,

And there, scarce less illustrious, goes the clerk!

REPORT

OF AN ADJUDGED CASE, NOT TO BE FOUND IN ANY OF THE BOOKS.

I.

The spectacles set them unhappily wrong;

The point in dispute was, as all the world knows,

To which the said spectacles ought to belong.

II.

So Tongue was the lawyer, and argued the cause
With a great deal of skill, and a wig full of learning;
While chief baron Ear set to balance the laws,
So sam'd for his talent in nicely discerning.

III.

In behalf of the Nose, it will quickly appear,

And your lordship, he said, will undoubtedly find,

That the Nose has had spectacles always in wear,

Which amounts to possession time out of mind.

IV.

Then holding the spectacles up to the court— Your lordship observes they are made with a straddle, As wide as the ridge of the Nose is; in short, Design'd to sit close to it, just like a saddle.

V.

Again, would your lordship a moment suppose

('Tis a case that has happen'd, and may be again)

That the visage or countenance had not a nose!

Pray who wou'd, or who cou'd, wear spectacles then?

VI.

On the whole, it appears—and my argument shows, With a reasoning the court will never condemn, That the spectacles plainly were made for the Nose, And the Nose was as plainly intended for them.

VII.

Then, shifting his side, (as a lawyer knows how)

He pleaded again in behalf of the Eyes:

But what were his arguments few people know.

But what were his arguments few people know,

For the court did not think they were equally wife.

VIII.

So his lordship decreed, with a grave solemn tone,

Decisive and clear, without one if or but—

That, whenever the Nose put his spectacles on,

By day-light or candle-light—Eyes should be shut!

ONTHE

BURNING OF LORD MANSFIELD'S LIBRARY,

BY THE MOB, IN THE MONTH OF JUNE 1780.

Í.

So then—the Vandals of our ifle, Sworn foes to sense and law, Have burnt to dust a nobler pile Than ever Roman saw!

II.

And Murray fighs o'er Pope and Swift,
And many a treasure more,
The well-judg'd purchase and the gift
That grac'd his letter'd store.

III.

The loss was bis alone;

But ages yet to come shall mourn

The burning of bis own.

ON THE SAME.

Ť.

When wit and genius meet their doom
In all devouring flame,

They tell us of the fate of Rome,
And bid us fear the fame.

II.

O'er Murray's loss the muses wept,

They selt the rude alarm,

Yet bless'd the guardian care that kept

His sacred head from harm.

III.

There mem'ry, like the bee that's fed From Flora's balmy store, The quintessence of all he read Had treasur'd up before.

IV.

The lawless herd, with fury blind,

Have done him cruel wrong;

The flow'rs are gone—but still we find

The honey on his tongue.

THE LOVE OF THE WORLD REPROVED;

QR,

HYPOCRISY DETECTED*

Good mussulman, abstain from pork;
There is a part in ev'ry swine
No friend or follower of mine
May taste, whate'er his inclination,
On pain of excommunication.
Such Mahomet's mysterious charge,
And thus he lest the point at large.
Had he the sinful part express'd,
They might with safety eat the rest;
But for one piece they thought it hard
From the whole hog to be debarr'd,
And set their wit at work to find
What joint the prophet had in mind.

^{*} It may be proper to inform the reader that this piece has already appeared in print, having found its way, though with fome unneceffary additions by an unknown hand, into the Leeds Journal, without the author's privity.

Much controverfy straight arose—
These choose the back, the belly those;
By some 'tis considently said
He meant not to forbid the head;
While others at that doctrine rail,
And piously prefer the tail.
Thus, conscience freed from ev'ry clog,
Mahometans eat up the hog.

You laugh—'tis well.—The tale applied
May make you laugh on t'other fide.
Renounce the world—the preacher cries.
We do—a multitude replies.
While one as innocent regards
A fnug and friendly game at cards;
And one, whatever you may fay,
Can fee no evil in a play;
Some love a concert, or a race;
And others—shooting, and the chase.
Revil'd and lov'd, renounc'd and follow'd,
Thus, bit by bit, the world is swallow'd;
vol. 1.

Each thinks his neighbour makes too free,
Yet likes a flice as well as he;
With fophistry their fauce they sweeten,
'Till quite from tail to fnout 'tis eaten.

THE LILY AND THE ROSE.

State and the state of the state of

I.

THE nymph must lose her female friend,

If more admir'd than she—

But where will sierce contention end,

If slowers can disagree?

II.

Within the garden's peaceful scene

Appear'd two lovely soes,

Aspiring to the rank of queen—

The Lily and the Rose.

III.

The Rose soon redden'd into rage,

And, swelling with disdain,

Appeal'd to many a poet's page

To prove her right to reign.

IV.

The Lily's height bespoke command—
A fair imperial flow'r;
She seem'd design'd for Flora's hand,
The sceptre of her pow'r.

V.

This civil bick'ring and debate

The goddess chanc'd to hear,

And slew to save, ere yet too late,

The pride of the parterre—

VI.

Your's is, she said, the nobler hue,
And your's the statelier mien;
And, till a third surpasses you,
Let each be deem'd a queen.

VII.

Thus, footh'd and reconcil'd, each feeks
The fairest British fair;
The seat of empire is her cheeks,
They reign united there.

IDEM LATINE REDDITUM.

I.

Heu inimicitias quoties parit æmula forma,

Quam raro pulchræ, pulchra placere potest?

Sed fines ultrà folitos discordia tendit,

Cum flores ipsos bilis et ira movent.

II.

Hortus ubi dulces præbet tacitosque recessus, Se rapit in partes gens animosa duas; Hic sibi regales Amaryllis candida cultus, Illic purpureo vindicat ore Rosa.

III.

Ira Rosam et meritis quæsita superbia tangunt,
Multaque serventi vix cohibenda sinû,
Dum sibi sautorum ciet undique nomina vatûm,
Jusque suum, multo carmine sulta, probat.

IV.

Altior emicat illa, et celso vertice nutat,

Ceu slores inter non habitura parem,

Fastiditque alios, et nata videtur in usus

Imperii, sceptrum, Flora quod ipsa gerat,

V.

Nec Dea non sensit civilis murmura rixæ,

Cui curæ est pictas pandere ruris opes.

Deliciasque suas nunquam non prompta tueri,

Dum licet et locus est, ut tueatur, adest.

VI.

Et tibi forma datur procerior omnibus, inquit,
Et tibi, principibus qui solet esse, color,
Et donec vincat quædam formosior ambas,
Et tibi reginæ nomen, et esto tibi.

VII.

H

T

F

His ubi sedatus suror est, petit utraque nympham,

Qualem inter Veneres Anglia sola parit;

Hanc penés imperium est, nihil optant amplius, hujus

Regnant in nitidis, et sine lite, genis.

THE

NIGHTINGALE AND GLOW-WORM,

A NIGHTINGALE, that all day long
Had cheer'd the village with his fong,
Nor yet at eve his note suspended,
Nor yet when eventide was ended,
Began to feel, as well he might,
The keen demands of appetite;
When, looking eagerly around,
He spied far off, upon the ground,
A something shining in the dark,
And knew the glow-worm by his spark;

So, stooping down from hawthorn top,

He thought to put him in his crop.

The worm, aware of his intent,

Harangu'd him thus, right eloquent—

Did you admire my lamp, quoth he,
As much as I your minstrels,
You would abhor to do me wrong,
As much as I to spoil your song;
For 'twas the self-same pow'r divine
Taught you to sing, and me to shine;
That you with music, I with light,
Might beautify and cheer the night.
The songster heard his short oration,
And, warbling out his approbation,
Releas'd him, as my story tells,
And sound a supper somewhere else.

Hence jarring sectaries may learn

Their real int'rest to discern;

That brother should not war with brother.

And worry and devour each other;

But fing and fhine by fweet consent,
Till life's poor transient night is spent,
Respecting in each other's case
The gifts of nature and of grace.

Those Christians best deserve the name Who studiously make peace their aim; Peace, both the duty and the prize Of him that creeps and him that slies.

VOTUM.

O matutini rores, auræque falubres,
O nemora, et lætæ rivis felicibus herbæ,
Graminei colles, et amænæ in vallibus umbræ!
Fata modò dederint quas olim in rure paterno
Delicias, procul arte, procul formidine novi,
Quam vellem ignotus, quod mens mea femper avebat,
Ante larem proprium placidam expectare fenectam,

Tum demum, exactis non infeliciter annis, Sortiri tacitum lapidem, aut sub cespite condi!

ON A GOLDFINCH STARVED TO DEATH IN HIS CAGE.

T.

Time was when I was free as air,

The thiftles downy feed my fair,

My drink the morning dew;

I perch'd at will on ev'ry fpray,

My form genteel, my plumage gay,

My ftrains for ever new.

II.

But gaudy plumage, sprightly strain,

And form genteel, were all in vain,

And of a transient date;

For, caught and cag'd, and starv'd to death,

In dying sighs my little breath

Soon pass'd the wiry grate.

III.

Thanks, gentle swain, for all my woes,
And thanks for this effectual close
And cure of ev'ry ill!
More cruelty could none express;
And I, if you had shown me less,
Had been your pris'ner still.

THE PINE-APPLE AND THE BEE.

The pine-apples, in triple row,
Were basking hot, and all in blow;
A bee of most discerning taste
Perceiv'd the fragrance as he pass'd,
On eager wing the spoiler came,
And search'd for crannies in the frame,
Urg'd his attempt on ev'ry side,
To ev'ry pane his trunk applied;

But still in vain, the frame was tight,
And only pervious to the light;
Thus having wasted half the day,
He trimm'd his slight another way,

Methinks, I faid, in thee I find The fin and madness of mankind. To joys forbidden man aspires, Confumes his foul with vain defires; Folly the fpring of his pursuit, And disappointment all the fruit. While Cynthio ogles as she passes The nymph between two chariot glaffes, She is the pine-apple, and he The filly unfuccessful bee. The maid, who views with pensive air The show-glass fraught with glitt'ring ware, Sees watches, bracelets, rings, and lockets, But fighs at thought of empty pockets; Like thine, her appetite is keen, But ah, the cruel glass between!

H

A

Fe

N

T

O

T

H

T

R

If

S

Our dear delights are often such,
Expos'd to view, but not to touch:
The sight our soolish heart inslames,
We long for pine-apples in frames:
With hopeless wish one looks and lingers;
One breaks the glass, and cuts his singers;
But they whom truth and wisdom lead,
Can gather honey from a weed.

HORACE. Book the 2d. ODE the 10th.

I.

RECEIVE, dear friend, the truths I teach,
So shalt thou live beyond the reach
Of adverse Fortune's pow'r;
Not always tempt the distant deep,
Nor always timorously creep
Along the treach'rous shore,

II.

He, that holds fast the golden mean,
And lives contentedly between

The little and the great,

Feels not the wants that pinch the poor,

Nor plagues that haunt the rich man's door,

Imbitt'ring all his state.

III.

The tallest pines feel most the pow'r

Of wintry blasts; the lostiest tow'r

Comes heaviest to the ground;

The bolts, that spare the mountain's side,

His cloud-capt eminence divide,

And spread the ruin round.

IV.

The well inform'd philosopher
Rejoices with an wholesome sear,
And hopes, in spite of pain;
If winter bellow from the north,
Soon the sweet spring comes dancing forth,
And nature laughs again.

V.

S

T

H

V

F

A

B

S

What if thine heav'n be overcast,

The dark appearance will not last;

Expect a brighter sky.

The God that strings the silver bow

Awakes sometimes the muses too,

And lays his arrows by.

VI.

If hindrances obstruct thy way,
Thy magnanimity display,
And let thy strength be seen;
But oh! if Fortune fill thy sail
With more than a propitious gale,
Take half thy canvass in.

A REFLECTION ON THE FOREGOING ODE.

And is this all? Can reason do no more

Than bid me shun the deep and dread the shore?

Sweet moralist! assort on life's rough sea,

The Christian has an art unknown to thee:

He holds no parley with unmanly sears;

Where duty bids he considently steers,

Faces a thousand dangers at her call,

And, trusting in his God, surmounts them all.

TRANSLATIONS FROM VINCENT BOURNE.

I. THE GLOW-WORM.

1. 4

Beneath the hedge, or near the stream,

A worm is known to stray;

That shows by night a lucid beam,

Which disappears by day.

II.

Disputes have been, and still prevail,
From whence his rays proceed;
Some give that honour to his tail,
And others to his head.

III.

But this is fure—the hand of might,

That kindles up the skies,

Gives bim a modicum of light

Proportion'd to his size.

IV.

Si

W

T

T

Perhaps indulgent nature meant,

By fuch a lamp bestow'd,

To bid the trav'ler, as he went,

Be careful where he trod:

V.

Nor crush a worm, whose useful light
Might serve, however small,
To shew a stumbling stone by night,
And save him from a fall.

VI.

Whate'er she meant, this truth divine
Is legible and plain,
'Tis pow'r almighty bids him shine,
Nor bids him shine in vain.

VII.

Ye proud and wealthy, let this theme
Teach humbler thoughts to you,
Since such a a reptile has its gem,
And boasts its splendour too.

II. THE JACKDAW.

I.

THERE is a bird who, by his coat,

And by the hoarseness of his note,

Might be suppos'd a crow;

A great frequenter of the church,

Where, bishop-like, he finds a perch,

And dormitory too.

II.

Above the steeple shines a plate,
That turns and turns, to indicate
From what point blows the weather.
Look up—your brains begin to swim,
'Tis in the clouds—that pleases him,
He chooses it the rather.

VOL. I.

III.

Fond of the speculative height,

Thither he wings his airy flight,

And thence securely sees

The bustle and the raree-show

That occupy mankind below,

Secure, and at his ease.

IV.

You think, no doubt, he fits and muses

On future broken bones and bruises,

If he should chance to fall.

No; not a single thought like that

Employs his philosophic pate,

Or troubles it at all.

V.

He fees, that this great roundabout—

The world, with all its motley rout,

Church, army, physic, law,

Its customs, and its bus'nesses,

Is no concern at all of his,

And says—what says he?—Caw.

VI.

Thrice happy bird! I too have seen Much of the vanities of men;

And, fick of having feen 'em,
Would cheerfully these limbs resign
For such a pair of wings as thine,
And such a head between 'em.

III. THE CRICKET.

I

LITTLE inmate, full of mirth,
Chirping on my kitchen hearth,
Wherefoe'er be thine abode,
Always harbinger of good,
Pay me for thy warm retreat
With a fong more foft and fweet;
In return thou shalt receive
Such a strain as I can give.

II.

P

F

Thus thy praise shall be exprest,
Inosfensive, welcome guest!
While the rat is on the scout,
And the mouse with curious snout,
With what vermin else insest
Ev'ry dish, and spoil the best;
Frisking thus before the fire,
Thou hast all thine heart's desire.

III.

Though in voice and shape they be Form'd as if akin to thee,
Thou surpassest, happier far,
Happiest grasshoppers that are;
Their's is but a summer's song,
Thine endures the winter long,
Unimpair'd and shrill and clear,
Melody throughout the year.

IV.

Neither night, nor dawn of day,

Puts a period to thy play:

Sing then—and extend thy span

Far beyond the date of man.

Wretched man, whose years are spent

In repining discontent,

Lives not, aged though he be,

Half a span, compar'd with thee.

IV. THE PARROT.

T

In painted plumes superbly drest,

A native of the gorgeous east,

By many a billow tost;

Poll gains at length the British shore,

Part of the captain's precious store—

A present to his toast.

II.

Belinda's maids are soon preserr'd

To teach him now and then a word,

As Poll can master it;

But 'tis her own important charge

To qualify him more at large,

And make him quite a wit.

III.

Sweet Poll! his doating mistress cries,

Sweet Poll! the mimic bird replies,

And calls aloud for sack.

She next instructs him in the kiss;

'Tis now a little one, like Miss,

And now a hearty smack.

IV.

At first he aims at what he hears;
And, list'ning close with both his ears,

Just catches at the sound;
But soon articulates aloud,

Much to th' amusement of the crowd,

And stuns the neighbours round.

V.

A querulous old woman's voice

His hum'rous talent next employs—

He scolds, and gives the lie.

And now he sings, and now is sick—

Here Sally, Susan, come, come quick;

Poor Poll is like to die!

VI.

Belinda and her bird! 'tis rare

To meet with fuch a well match'd pair,

The language and the tone,

Each character in ev'ry part

Suftain'd with fo much grace and art,

And both in unifon.

And pleafe, if any thin, HVild pleafe.

When children first begin to spell,

And stammer out a syllable,

We think them tedious creatures;

But difficulties soon abate,

When birds are to be taught to prate,

And women are the teachers.

THE SHRUBBERY.

WRITTEN IN A TIME OF AFFLICTION.

T.

On, happy shades—to me unblest!

Friendly to peace, but not to me!

How ill the scene that offers rest,

And heart that cannot rest, agree!

II.

This glaffy stream, that spreading pine,
Those alders quiv'ring to the breeze,
Might sooth a soul less hurt than mine,
And please, if any thing could please.

III,

But fix'd unalterable care

Foregoes not what fhe feels within,

Shows the fame fadness ev'ry where,

And slights the season and the scene.

IV.

For all that pleas'd in wood or lawn,

While peace posses'd these silent bow'rs,

Her animating smile withdrawn,

Has lost its beauties and its pow'rs.

V.

The faint or moralist should tread

This moss-grown alley, musing, slow;

They seek, like me, the secret shade,

But not, like me, to nourish woe?

VI.

Me fruitful scenes and prospects waste

Alike admonish not to roam;

These tell me of enjoyments past,

And those of sorrows yet to come.

THE WINTER NOSEGAY.

I.

What nature, alas! has denied

To the delicate growth of our isle,

Art has in a measure supplied,

And winter is deck'd with a smile.

See, Mary, what beauties I bring

From the shelter of that funny shed,

Where the flow'rs have the charms of the spring,

Though abroad they are frozen and dead,

II.

'Tis a bow'r of Arcadian sweets,
Where Flora is still in her prime,

A fortress, to which she retreats

From the cruel assaults of the clime,

While earth wears a mantle of fnow, These pinks are as fresh and as gay

As the fairest and sweetest that blow On the beautiful bosom of May. III. The territory on the down or the

See how they have fafely furviv'd

The frowns of a fky fo fevere;

Such Mary's true love, that has liv'd

Through many a turbulent year.

The charms of the late blowing rofe

Seem grac'd with a livelier hue,

And the winter of forrow best shows

The truth of a friend such as you.

MUTUAL FORBEARANCE NECESSARY TO THE HAPPINESS OF THE MARRIED STATE.

The lady thus address'd her spouse—

What a mere dungeon is this house!

By no means large enough; and, was it,

Yet this dull room, and that dark closet—

Those hangings, with their worn-out graces,

Long beards, long noses, and pale faces—

Are such an antiquated scene,
They overwhelm me with the spleen!
Sir Humphry, shooting in the dark,
Makes answer quite beside the mark:
No doubt, my dear, I bade him come,
Engag'd myself to be at home,

And shall expect him at the door Precisely when the clock strikes four.

You are so deaf, the lady cried,

(And rais'd her voice, and frown'd beside)

You are so sadly deaf, my dear,

What shall I do to make you hear?

Dismis poor Harry! he replies;
Some people are more nice than wise—
For one slight trespass all this stir?

What if he did ride whip and fpur,

'Twas but a mile—your fav'rite horse

Will never look one hair the worfe.

Well, I protest 'tis past all bearing— Child! I am rather hard of hearingYes, truly—one must scream and bawl—
I tell you, you can't hear at all!
Then, with a voice exceeding low,
No matter if you hear or no.

Alas! and is domestic strife, That forest ill of human life. A plague fo little to be fear'd, As to be wantonly incurr'd, To gratify a fretful passion, On ev'ry trivial provocation? The kindest and the happiest pair Will find occasion to forbear; And fomething, ev'ry day they live, To pity, and, perhaps, forgive. But if infirmities that fall In common to the lot of all-A blemish or a sense impair'd-Are crimes fo little to be spar'd, Then farewell all that must create The comfort of the wedded state:

Instead of harmony, 'tis jar And tumult, and intestine war.

The love that cheers life's latest stage,
Proof against sickness and old age,
Preserv'd by virtue from declension,
Becomes not weary of attention;
But lives, when that exterior grace
Which first inspir'd the slame decays,
'Tis gentle, delicate, and kind,
To faults compassionate or blind,
And will with sympathy endure
Those evils it would gladly cure:
But angry, coarse, and harsh expression
Shows love to be a mere profession;
Proves that the heart is none of his,
Or soon expels him if it is.

TO THE REV. MR. NEWTON.

Old senter, aslong o'er the n

AN INVITATION INTO THE COUNTRY.

I.

The swallows in their torpid state

Compose their useless wing,

And bees in hives as idly wait

The call of early spring.

П.

The keenest frost that binds the stream;

The wildest wind that blows,

Are neither selt nor fear'd by them,

Secure of their repose.

III.

But man, all feeling and awake,

The gloomy scene surveys;

With present ills his heart must ake,

And pant for brighter days.

IV.

Old winter, halting o'er the mead,

Bids me and Mary mourn;

But lovely spring peeps o'er his head,

And whispers your return.

V.

Then April, with her fifter May,
Shall chase him from the bow'rs,
And weave fresh garlands ev'ry day,
To crown the smiling hours.

VI.

And, if a tear, that speaks regret

Of happier times, appear,

A glimpse of joy, that we have met,

Shall shine, and dry the tear.

TRANSLATION OF PRIOR'S.

Apppe Cupidi da dixir Den çir

Mercator, vigiles oculos ut fallere possit,

Nomine sub sicto trans mare mittit opes;

Lené sonat liquidumque meis Euphelia chordis,

Sed solam exoptant te, mea vota, Chlöe.

IIO WA

Ad speculum ornabat nitidos Euphelia crines,

Cum dixit mea lux, heus, cane, sume lyram.

Namque lyram juxtà positam cum carmine vidit,

Suave quidem carmen dulcisonamque lyram,

III. withing and to thin 63

Fila lyræ vocemque paro, suspiria surgunt,

Et miscent numeris murmura mæsta meis,

Dumque tuæ memoro laudes, Euphelia, sormæ,

Tota anima intereà pendet ab ore Chlöes.

vol. 1.

IV.

Subrubet illa pudore, et contrahit altera frontem,

M e torquetme a mens conscia, psallo, tremo;

Atque Cupidinea dixit Dea cincta corona,

Heu! fallendi artem quam didicere parum.

BOADICE A:

AN ODE.

T

When the British warrior queen,
Bleeding from the Roman rods,
Sought, with an indignant mien,
Counsel of her country's gods,

II.

Sage beneath the fpreading oak
Sat the Druid, hoary chief;
Ev'ry burning word he fpoke
Full of rage, and full of grief.

111.

Princess! if our aged eyes

Weep upon thy matchless wrongs, brief and more.

Tis because resentment ties

All the terrors of our tongues.

·IV.

Rome shall perish—write that word

In the blood that she has spilt;

Perish, hopeless and abhorr'd,

Deep in ruin as in guilt.

V.

Rome, for empire far renown'd,

Tramples on a thousand states;

Soon her pride shall kiss the ground—

Hark! the Gaul is at her gates!

Other Romans shall arife,

Heedless of a soldier's name; dead and dead along

Sounds, not arms, shall win the prize

Harmony the path to same.

VII.

Then the progeny that fprings hear and it table. Then the forests of our land, and with the stable of the stable o

Arm'd with thunder, clad with wings,
Shall a wider world command.

VIII.

Regions Cefar never knew and a fine flash amo X.

Thy posterity shall sway, a san books and all a

Where his eagles never flew, and board added a fline of None invincible as they.

IX.

Pregnant with celeftial fire, and assignment of the Bending, as he swept the chords the bending to the condition of the sweet but awful lyre.

X.

Felt them in her bosom glow;
Rush'd to battle, sought, and died;
Dying, hurl'd them at the soe.

The on a wint The cale . IX a land of the

Ruffians, pitiless as proud,

Heav'n awards the vengeance due;

Empire is on us bestow'd,

Shame and ruin wait for you.

HEROIS M.

in a tradition want of his thousand its two and in A

While the of he delight well the consider re agreement in the set of the best of

Burn de l'estag inches and alors l'expertit on

THERE was a time when Ætna's filent fire Slept unperceiv'd, the mountain yet entire; When, conscious of no danger from below, She tow'r'd a cloud-capt pyramid of snow. No thunders shook with deep intestine sound The blooming groves that girdled her around. Her unctuous olives, and her purple vines, (Unselt the sury of those bursting mines) The peasant's hopes, and not in vain, assured. In peace upon her sloping sides matur'd,

When on a day, like that of the last doom,
A conflagration lab'ring in her womb,
She teem'd and heav'd with an infernal birth,
That shook the circling seas and solid earth.
Dark and voluminous the vapours rise,
And hang their horrors in the neighb'ring skies,
While through the stygian veil that blots the day,
In dazzling streaks, the vivid lightnings play.
But, oh! what muse, and in what pow'rs of song,
Can trace the torrent as it burns along?
Havoc and devastation in the van,
It marches o'er the prostrate works of man—
Vines, olives, herbage, forests, disappear,
And all the charms of a Sicilian year.

Revolving seasons, fruitless as they pass,

See it an uninform'd and idle mass;

Without a soil t' invite the tiller's care,

Or blade that might redeem it from despair.

Yet time at length (what will not time achieve?)

Clothes it with earth, and bids the produce live.

Once more the spiry myrtle crowns the glade,
And ruminating flocks enjoy the shade.
Oh, bliss precarious, and unsafe retreats,
Oh charming paradise of short-liv'd sweets!
The self-same gale that wasts the fragrance round
Brings to the distant ear a sullen sound;
Again the mountain seels th' imprison'd soe,
Again pours ruin on the vale below.
Ten thousand swains the wasted scene deplore,
That only suture ages can restore.

Ye monarchs, whom the lure of honour draws,

Who write in blood the merits of your cause,

Who strike the blow, then plead your own desence—

Glory your aim, but justice your pretence;

Behold in Ætna's emblematic fires

The mischies your ambitious pride inspires!

Fast by the stream that bounds your just domain.

And tells you where ye have a right to reign,

A nation dwells, not envious of your throne,

Studious of peace, their neighbours', and their own.

Ill-fated race! how deeply must they rue Their only crime, vicinity to you! The trumpet founds, your legions fwarm abroad, Through the ripe harvest lies their destin'd road; At ev'ry step beneath their feet they tread The life of multitudes, a nation's bread! Earth feems a garden in its lovelieft drefs Before them, and behind a wilderness. Famine, and pestilence, her first-born fon, Attend to finish what the sword begun; And, echoing praises such as siends might earn, And folly pays, refound at your return; A calm fucceeds—but plenty, with her train Of heart-felt joys, fucceeds not foon again. And years of pining indigence must show What scourges are the gods that rule below.

Yet man, laborious man, by flow degrees,
(Such is his thirst of opulence and ease)
Plies all the sinews of industrious toil,
Gleans up the refuge of the gen'ral spoil,

Rebuilds the tow'rs that smok'd upon the plain, And the sun gilds the shining spires again.

Increasing commerce and reviving art
Renew the quarrel on the conqu'rors' part;
And the sad lesson must be learn'd once more,
That wealth within is ruin at the door.

What are ye, monarchs, laurel'd heroes, fay—
But Ætnas of the suffring world ye sway?

Sweet nature, stripp'd of her embroider'd robe,

Deplores the wasted regions of her globe;

And stands a witness at truth's awful bar,

To prove you, there, destroyers as ye are.

Oh, place me in some heav'n-protected isle,
Where peace, and equity, and freedom smile;
Where no volcano pours his siery slood,
No crested warrior dips his plume in blood;
Where pow'r secures what industry has won;
Where to succeed is not to be undone;
A land that distant tyrants hate in vain,
In Britain's isle, beneath a George's reign!

THE POET, THE OYSTER, AND SENSITIVE PLANT.

An Oyster, cast upon the shore, Was heard, though never heard before, Complaining in a speech well-worded, And worthy thus to be recorded— Ah, hapless wretch! condemn'd to dwell For ever in my native shell; Ordain'd to move when others pleafe, Not for my own content or ease; But tofs'd and buffeted about, Now in the water and now out. *Twere better to be born a stone, Of ruder shape, and feeling none, Than with a tenderness like mine, And fensibilities fo fine! I envy that unfeeling shrub, Fast-rooted against ev'ry rub.

The plant he meant grew not far off,

And felt the fneer with fcorn enough;

Was hurt, difgusted, mortified,

And with asperity replied.

When, cry the botanists—and stare—
Did plants call'd sensitive grow there?
No matter when—a poet's muse is
To make them grow just where she chooses.

You, shapeless nothing in a dish—
You, that are but almost a fish—
I scorn your coarse infinuation,
And have most plentiful occasion
To wish myself the rock I view,
Or such another dolt as you:
For many a grave and learned clerk,
And many a gay unletter'd spark,
With curious touch examines me,
If I can seel as well as he;
And, when I bend, retire, and shrink,
Says—Well, 'tis more than one would think!

Thus life is spent (oh, sie upon't!)

In being touch'd, and crying—Don't!

A poet, in his ev'ning walk,

O'erheard and check'd this idle talk.

And your fine sense, he said, and your's,

Whatever evil it endures,

Deserves not, if so soon offended,

Much to be pitied or commended.

Disputes, though short, are far too long,

Where both alike are in the wrong;

Your seelings, in their full amount,

Are all upon your own account.

You, in your grotto-work enclos'd,

Complain of being thus expos'd;

Yet nothing feel in that rough coat,

Save when the knife is at your throat,

Wherever driv'n by wind or tide,

Exempt from ev'ry ill beside.

And, as for you, my Lady Squeamish, Who reckon ev'ry touch a blemish, If all the plants that can be found

Embellishing the scene around

Should droop and wither where they grow,

You would not feel at all—not you.

The noblest minds their virtue prove

By pity, sympathy, and love;

These, these are feelings truly fine,

And prove their owner half divine.

His censure reach'd them as he dealt it,
And each by shrinking show'd he felt it.

An union foun'd, as mine with thee, Nor rallely, or in sport,
May be as servent in degree,
And shickel in its fort,
And shickel in its fort,
And may as the in confort arrive,

The bod in percha bod off

Adoras, ally guidur ting in its lend,

I be floot, whereou is grown

Mall the Plants that can can be for

THE REV. WILLIAM CAWTHORNE UNWIN.

T.

Unwin, I should but ill repay

The kindness of a friend,

Whose worth deserves as warm a lay

As ever friendship penn'd,

Thy name omitted in a page

That would reclaim a vicious age.

11.

An union form'd, as mine with thee,

Not rashly, or in sport,

May be as servent in degree,

And faithful in its sort,

And may as rich in comfort prove,

As that of true fraternal love.

III.

The bud inferted in the rind,

The bud of peach or rose,

Adorns, though diff ring in its kind,

The stock whereon it grows,

With flow'r as fweet, or fruit as fair, As if produc'd by nature there.

IV.

I seize thy name in haste,

And place it in this first essay,

Lest this should prove the last.

'Tis where it should be—in a plan

That holds in view the good of man.

V.

The poet's lyre, to fix his fame,
Should be the poet's heart;
Affection lights a brighter flame
Than ever blaz'd by art.
No muses on these lines attend,
I sink the poet in the friend.

5 SF 51

END OF THE FIRST VOLUME.

the cut test will can make the turn de With flow're at force, or from as fair, be war in the same of L'bulege liek Not rich, I sendy what i may - send I don sall I feize the burne ja hafte, ... And place it is reiseful offer a seed of a seed of Left this flourd prove shy it lead this The where it thould be—in a plan to the where That holds in view the good of man, we were The poecs lyre, to fix his fame, ... where have Should be the poer's hearts " he of the Affection lights a brighter fame, a sewed a control Than ever bigald by and a second fine a second Ne apules on these lines attend, saying the contraction Hunk the poet in the friend.

END OF THE SIERT WOLUME.